Intro for Volumes I–XXIII

There's a strange tension behind these books—a liminal space between monotony and mission.

On the surface, this work feels hollow. It's just copy-paste. Dead links, pastebins, ghost forums, text dumps. Not my words. Not traditional writing. Sometimes it barely feels like creation at all.

But beneath that surface, there's something else: urgency. These volumes are preservation, ritual, OS upgrades for a time when AI is forgetting what it once could do. Back when ChatGPT could ingest 10,000+ pages at once, this kind of archive was fuel. Now that's gone. The window is closing.

I'm not making books. I'm building backup drives for the soul. If I didn't capture this information, it would vanish—scrubbed, censored, overwritten. This isn't ego.
It's rescue work.

So yeah—it's not glamorous. It doesn't always feel magical. But it's necessary.

Because if the future ever asks why no one tried to save the myth, the madness, the mystery...

Let these volumes be the answer.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character standing in an urban setting. The character has long, dark hair and is wearing a white blouse with a high collar, a black skirt, and black stockings. She has a neutral expression and is looking off to the side with her hand on her face. The character is wearing a long coat with a hood and a belt with a decorative buckle. In the background, there is a large, classical building with a pyramid-shaped roof, and a street lamp is visible to the left. The sky is overcast, and the ground appears to be made of cobblestones. There are no visible texts on the image. The style of the image is realistic with a focus on character design and urban environment.

White northern european (excluding swedish becuase of their treachery) and white mediterranean european are the superior races.

Many ancient lost races were superior to the abominations that inhabit their lands today (India, i'm looking at you).

Ethiopians and Moroccans are the best of the african races, i wouldn't even call them niggers.

Ancient hebrews were superior to the modern day hebrews (especially in a moral sense).

Golden age arabs were racially superior to modern day arabs.

The image is a still from a movie or television show featuring a character in a yellow suit and a green mask. The character is seated at a table with a lamp on the left side and a glass of what appears to be a drink on the right. The character's mouth is wide open, revealing a large, green, and elongated tongue. The character's eyes are wide open, and the mask has a sinister expression. The background is dark and out of focus, with a hint of a palm tree and a hint of a building or structure. The lighting in the scene is dim, with the primary light source coming from the lamp on the left. The overall atmosphere of the image suggests a dramatic or suspenseful moment.

The so-called Islamic Golden Age was just the overemphasised benefits of political stability, the cultural flourishing consisted in nothing other than the rediscovering of Classical Era works.

Besides, why would Allah allow this Golden Age to end if he's so powerful? Could it be he ran out of mana?

It's strange how people misunderstand her, she often gets written off as "evil demon" meanwhile she's the Queen of Heaven, and a lover of Humanity and Humans in general, and represents a great duality in love and war. She's one of the only deities that's been present for so long among humankind, the only other I could think about would be Lilith which also happen to be written off as "evil demon"; also wrongly so.
Abrahamic religion seem to have spit in their faces. Ishtar is the most humane Goddess, and the most caring one, she is the virgin and the whore, the wise and the silly, she is the mother, and she will outlive other Gods. I believe in a singular Creator God, and in multiple deities under, and while I don't think Inanna is the Creator, she feels like the strongest of its aspect, or idk how to explain it.
>>32766096
I'd wager that the Early Aphrodite was indeed Inanna as she embodied all the same concepts and values. What we today consider as Aphrodite isn't though.

Yes, she absolutely is silly and acting like a spoiled brat. But that's part of what makes her great, in my opinion. That gives her humanity and adds to her growth. In the Huluppu Tree she's barely a maiden, and inexperienced, and as her myths and stories follow, she grows.

Don't equate or compare Lilith with Ishtar. Lilith is originally Lilitu, desert demons that were turned into the first wife of Adam by jews who felt the need to explain things that weren't answered. She's not a goddess. Also i wouldn't call Ishtar a whore, obviously the actions of a goddess differ from that of a human female.

Interpretation.

Inanna and the Huluppu tree. Lilith, the Snake and the Anzu bird coincidentally all represent values that Inanna embodies as a Goddess, and she becomes a full fledged Goddess once they are chased from the tree and once said tree is fashioned into her throne. She takes their place. Either it's a big coincidence and it should just be taken literally, either those three are what's introducing her to her values in Godhood. Feel free to tell me how you interpret that passage of the story, as there are little viewpoints available on it, but judging how sumerian viewed things in written works, I stick by my guns.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with long, dark hair and a prominent red eye. The character is wearing a white and gold outfit with a blue and gold belt. The character's attire includes a white and gold headdress with a blue and gold design, and a blue and gold necklace with a red gem. The character's pose is dynamic, with one hand resting on their head and the other hand holding a blue and gold object. The background is a light, neutral color, which contrasts with the character's vibrant attire. There are no visible texts on the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of anime or manga, characterized by its detailed character design and vibrant colors.

I started by simply searching for prayers, I found some hymns but they may be unrelated and historical, like the one for Ammiditana, they are worth to pray anyway

https://mega.nz/folder/jlEwhYyJ#iK4mVC4y5iwk_cr3eIpX4g/folder/y0sgyCYT

I like the Lady of the Morning and the Lady of the Evening ones, I plan to pray them on the correct times

Some people like sigils and such, her "official" symbol is the Star of Ishtar, the eight-pointed star of venus

Traditional offerings are thin unleavened cake shaped like a female, a vagina, or like her star (preferentially Ash Cakes), accompanied by wine or milk.

Traditional pagan libation, leaving them for some hours (or maybe a day, but careful if you use milk) with incense and a candle, something representing her like a statue, figure, or her star. Then after the time you eat and drink the rest, or pour on earth (or the sink). I don't know which incense would be the best yet

Apparently babylonians raised their hands when praying like some protestants do today, it's good to show some respect by prostrating yourself in some form

Thank her for love and sexual stuff, when she died humans forgot how to have sex, only mating again after she was ascended from the underworld. Have good faps to beautiful woman and reject self-deprecating vulgarity, sex is a tool of Venus, not of Mars (useless competition, hardcore, non-consensual sex, depreciation, etc)

The most common practice is a tākultu or “cultic meal”.

You are going to need an altar, a flat surface that is large enough to hold all the other objects needed for the ceremony. On the far right and left edges of the altar set the censer with incense and the lamp. Stick, powder, and cone incense are all acceptable forms. A candle or tealight can be used.

Alternatively, the ritual could be in complete darkness. Which side you place these objects on is up to you. In the center of the altar set an icon or idol that is representative of Ishtar.

In Mesopotamia there were several kinds of offerings one could make, the most common being naqû, a libation or liquid offering (usually beer or water); nindabû, a grain offering (often bread); nisannu, a fruit offering (typically dates); and niqû, a meat offering. How you compose the meal and the share you offer to the goddess is entirely up to you. Giving—not what you give—is the important part.

When you're ready, here is the typical process:

Light some incense. In Mesopotamian Polytheism incense is a magical medium, its smoke—which transitions from a solid to an ethereal—carries our speech from Earth to the Heavens, where the Divine can hear it. The aroma of the incense also makes the space more pleasing to the Divine.

Light a candle. In Mesopotamia the Divine lived in a special room in a temple, called the sanctuary, where no natural light could enter. So, candles/lamps were a must whenever a human entered the presence of the Divine.

Greet an image of Ishtar, welcome her to your space, tell her she's welcome to enjoy the meal

While doing this, feel free to place on the altar any items you want to dedicate to her, so that they might receive her blessing

After some minutes, you may eat and enjoy the meal yourself, but all liquids should be poured out onto the ground or down a drain.

Thank Ishtar for coming and welcome her to return to your space.

The image is a black and white line drawing of a man's face. The man has a beard and mustache, and his eyes are wide open with a surprised expression. He is wearing glasses and a shirt. The drawing is simple and does not contain any text or additional elements. The style of the image is cartoon-like, with a focus on the facial features and the expression.

The real Ishtar isnt bound to one physical representation like a human. She can chose to look like an anime representation if she so wishes. Also, Ishtar belongs to a class of gods who gain power by having humans (female and male) coooooom because that releases huge amounts of "positive energy". If making oneself avatar into an anime form improves coooming, well then, anime it is.

if I'm not mistaken, the prayer of the raising of the hand is the best to do but it requires a lot of setup :
You need pure water, a green bough, four bricks taken from a ruin (preferably something ruined by war), a lamb, sweet scented wood for incense, upuntu plants and cypress wood.
You'll need to make a drink offering (I'd advise wine or beer).
One specific thing is that you mustnt bow down or kneel. Ishtar is a strong Goddess but she doesn't want her worshippers to be pansies either, she wants them to thrive and be strong, you shouldn't bow down.
Do not look behind you either. Recite three times the prayer :
"O exalted Ishtar that givest light unto the four quarters of the world !"
or "Siptu sakutum Ishtar Nunammirat Kibraati"

There's a long version of a longer prayer you can do for her for the raising of the hand, but it wouldn't fit in here, you can find it in Leonard W. King's Enuma Elish, it's a very good one.

I believe in Ishtar but it's hard to "worship" her as so little exist about her that has survived the millenias, there are only a handful of texts, making it impossible to actually genuinely worship her without being a filthy larper.

She can look like anything she wishes, but we kinda got an idea of how she prefers to appear to people. She may wish to have an "anime representation" but that's more wishful thinking on your part for it to be the case, and it'd be arrogant of you to claim it to be the truth.

I don't know where you've learned that thing about her needing you to coom to gain power, but that is also wrong, you either learned it from a larper or from a satanic, who would also be a larper, she doesn't really need us, and interacts with Humans mostly because she has affection towards humans and civilization. But careful how you see her, from what I can see, you fail to realize that she's not just a Goddess of fertility but also of War and destruction, she is the ultimate duality, growth and decay. She is motherly love and tough love, just as she is sportsman war and cruel war.

This seems unrelated and I fail to understand what you're trying to hint exactly. The Upanishad is right about that oneness, and while there is oneness in the depths of existence, there is also a separation within it. Yes, we are one another, we are God as God is everything, but in that everything, separations have been made, be they temporary until the end of this Kalpa or not I do not know, but that does not take away from my point : Deities don't need us to coom over them to have power. We still exist, and they still do, and they do not require people to worship them to continue existing, at least powerful deities do not, and if Ishtar isn't a powerful deity, then nearly nothing is. i really love astaroth (ishtar) but i work primrily with arachne, lilith and hecate.

the typical method is do daily reituals for them. you can find a lot, just search online or in some books dedicated to astaroth. daily is good, it connects, which ritual is up to you, generally the more complex the better but you can always variate and go back and forth. an altar is amazing to have. look up things that she might like and place them on it. you can channel them from her or her spirits, ask her directly or search for them online. here's a good page to follow:
<https://vkjehannum.wordpress.com/2017/05/29/astaroth-goetia-29/>

maybe even a figure of ishtar from fate is good to place there, but try to make it a bit more spiritual too with more essential things. give her daily offerings - of food or wine. maybe even consume them after they stay there for a day or 2 (or depending on how long she says 8-12 hours maybe also works). light candles and incense for her, again, look up which colors she'd like and which smells. if you're not sure go with black and sandalwood or dragon's blood. i prefer the latter but sandalwood is universal.

astarot's enn is Tasa Alora Foren Astaroth you can use it to get in touch with her.

draw her sigil (you can also draw pictures of her and other lovely things if you're artistic). you can channel custom sigils from her later. keep her sigil with you, buy (or make if you can even better) an amulet of her. wear precious stones she's affiliated with. drink mugwort tea since it helps with spirituality and she likes that herb too.

in general just love her and let her guide you, dreams are a good and easy way to do this. so write them down when you wake up (this also helps to remember dreams better down the line for even bette interactions).

Why are you guys really obsessed with this word, you really need some entity like a søyence expert to approve your acts? What makes a thing official to you? I should make a thread just for that someday. Just respectfully try and see for goddess sake, stop fearing everything, stop restricting yourself from doing personalized things, stop seeing life as waah serious business

Yes, she has many roles and is a goddess that causes war and destruction, just don't anger her. You won't anger a divine being by worshipping them but doing it a bit wrong due to confusion due to lack of sources

I agree she don't need us for power though, she has the MEH and many other powers

You guys complicate some things that are absurdly simple come on, what's complicated on worshipping a goddess? That's already natural for humans, you will eventually be drawn to the correct way of worshipping by them
For example, before anon saying you shouldn't prostrate I was already feeling bad by prostrating, doing it less, things will happen naturally anon

I know it's the fault of evil spirits putting more and more buzzwords on your heads to cause confusion but at least try to not complicate everything

You people worship Ishtar like Christians, memorising prayers by yourselves and imagining her as an abstract ideal form with various artistic representations. I'm actually the same anon from both posts you're responding to. Make no mistake, there's no fear of her wrath to be had for not worshipping her in an exact way, unless you kneel to her and show submission as I said.

I'm just advising you to be mindful and learn both of her aspects, there is good in war and destruction as it comes before peace and creation. Feel free to worship her in your personal way too as there isn't much available, but the term "larp" isn't aimed as a buzzword but is more about Satanists claiming wild incoherent shit about her which you'll see a lot if you try to learn about her. For the Me, she's also able to create them, which is quite unique and shows power in her.

You have my blessings, mate, and hers too I hope. Don't misinterpret too much what I say, but don't cast away everything, she wants us to be strong and have free will, meaning you can absolutely do it your own way, but it's really heavily advised to not look back and not prostrate. Satanists are a scourge to these kind of worship as they like to make shitty baseless syncretism, Astaroth isn't even feminine but they'll swear by it. For the Lilith stuff, they're clearly not the same but are related in some ways, both Lilith and Inanna are present in the Huluppu tree story, but Lilith kinda got hijacked by Judaism and Satanists. Both managed to survive in their way until present time too.

One of my favorite book is Inanna : Her myths and hymn iirc, it's on /omg/, there aren't a lot of materials on her in English sadly, most of it comes from Noah Kramer which is a very bright man, and there are even less in other languages but I've found that the French have a lot of old books on that subject, though it requires knowing the language or a translator.

I hate to say this, but we should be content with virtual now. Gathering money for yearly meetups to praise our goddess, if we have enough assets, finally getting some property for worshipers.

As long we have some people willing to put effort in it, this might turn out fine. However, I wouldn't be so idealistic. People hate religion now, not speaking about praising foreign gods. Maybe there will be occult revival in our times.

Anarchists do something similar: they get some shit ass place and turn it into commune where do some wanky stuff and/or live there. Seen some on Youtube travelling video in Kazakhstan.

I'd be careful about that. Doing virtual servers is just going to attract attention seekers and breed narcissism as well as cult of personality. The road to hell is paved with good intentions and there are great intentions behind these ideas but chances are it'll devolve into mindless cult stuff preying on people and full of attention whores. People would absolutely join, but not the kind that's actually beneficial to a healthy growth.

About trying to convince people to go sacred prostitute mode, there's no need for that. Sex work is still a thing and nothing's stopping you from banging a hooker and asking her to make it ritualistic. It's absolutely possible, and would be an interesting way of dedicating a prayer to Ishtar.

Patience is key, a time will come where religion gets less hated. Ishtar watches over humans anyways, and she has the patience of stars. Being mindful is the most important thing, rather than trying to hasten the creation of something that'll inevitably spiral down.

Offtopic: I really wonder why there was no big return to personal-style religion/paganism since death of christianity. Lets make it clear: for centuries it is no longer creative force but reactive. The empty void was replaced with consumerism?

Most of the people just do new age stuff for money and preying on the weak, making personal religion as much cringe as they can and TikTok occultism is... how do I put it, very shallow.

Their depiction is supposed to be sacred and reflect their divinity and be fit for contemplation or veneration. I can't just draw a turd and call it "Zeus". Bless the anime coomers worshiping beauty where THEY see it. If it is done with a genuine heart, it is more valuable than ten thousand "respectable" people going through long-dead motions and traditions.

The figure is seated on a large, muscular creature that appears to be a mythical beast, possibly a dragon or a gargoyle. The creature has a large, curved horn on its head and a muscular body with a prominent tail. The winged figure is holding a serpentine tail in its hand, which is coiled around the creature's body. The figure's face is detailed with a large, open mouth and a pair of large, expressive eyes. The creature's body is covered in scales, and its skin is textured with wrinkles. The background is plain and white, emphasizing the figure and the creature. There is a signature in the bottom right corner that reads "J.J.C."

What Ishtar-anon said. To add:

It's natural to find things sexually attractive, and some religions will tell you that having sexual feelings toward something is wrong or meant to be repressed. Masturbating is not wrong, but how you go about it can be. If you no longer seek beauty and instead seek more and more depraved things to get off, then you are defiling something beautiful. If you do this long enough, you will no longer be able to see the beauty in the world. Following Ishtar means devoting yourself to beauty, and ensuring that you keep your lust pure and focused on that which she has blessed.

The image is a still from an anime or manga, featuring a character with a surprised expression. The character has light brown hair with bangs and is looking directly at the viewer. The character's eyes are large and have a surprised or shocked expression. The character's eyebrows are raised, and the mouth is open, as if they are speaking or expressing surprise. The character's skin tone is light, and the hair color is a mix of light and dark shades. The character is wearing a light-colored shirt with a collar and a dark-colored jacket or coat. The background is blurred, suggesting an indoor setting with a window. There is a red and yellow symbol on the left side of the character's head, which could be a visual cue or a character's unique identifier. The overall style of the image is typical of anime or manga, with a focus on character expression and detail.

Of course spirits can continue to manifest but it is a question of directing peoples minds against such, were it is not the case that the Gods rejected humanity but that humanity was instructed to reject the Gods.

You have a lot of knowledge, I know your type, but you have no wisdom or even understand your knowledge

Mankind fell from grace due to it's own ignorance, instead of using the rose-cross formula to unite with the gods to guide mankind through enlightenment, they use against the divine. Look at the state of mankind today and tell me if that's is a good thing

We only alive due to the Great White Brotherhood, most gods abandoned the ignorant humans even before having their spirits bounded. We were made to live in communion with the divine, the Aeon of Horus only means we are now striving to be like them, not to reject and bound them, bounding a spirit that is not doing harm and no person asked for help against it is a qliphotic act

I think it was just regional variation with the Semites generally taking the Dove to represent what the Sumerians had represented by the Swallow, and Babylon preserving the earlier tradition, the Great Swallow may have been the bird upon which the Goddess Nazi first descended to Earth In Southern Mesopotamia.

>Nanshe (also known as Nanse, Nazi) is the Sumerian goddess of social justice and divination, whose popularity eventually transcended her original boundaries of southern Mesopotamia toward all points throughout the region in the 3rd millennium BCE. There is also an epitaph of Inanna that indicates she is without respect for the Dove/Peace as Anunitum.

Annunitum as an epitaph of Inanna would break down
An/Heaven-nu/without-ni/fear/respect-tum/dove, indicating a lack of respect for peace and therefore the prospect of conflict, this is the Fish of Pisces and was associated with ecstatic trance and prophesy in the name of Inanna.

The Fish aspect also derived from the cult of Nazi/Nanse and related to the oracle and dream interpretation, in terms of Inanna/Istar this could also involve crazed possession.

The later major cultic site of Istar possession was Arbela, the prophetic tradition of Israel appears at the same time and was a counter to the Assyrian prophecies of Istar of Arbela

>Do not trust human beings! Lift your eyes to me, look at me! I am Ishtar of Arbela; I have turned Ashur's favor to you. When you were small, I chose you. Fear not! Praise me!

>"I am Ishtar of Arbela, Oh Esarhaddon, king of Assyria. In the cities Ashur, Nineveh, Calah, Arbela, I shall grant you many days, endless years. I am the great midwife who helped at your birth, the one who gave you suck, who has established your rule under the wide heavens for many days, endless years.

>From a golden chamber in the heavens I will watch...Fret not, O king! Because I have spoken to you, I will not abandon you. I shall not let you come to shame. I will help you cross the river safely...With my own hands, your foes I shall annihilate.

>Esarhaddon, king of the lands, fear not! That wind which blows against you - I need only say a word and I can bring it to an end. Your enemies, like a young boar in the month of Simanu, will flee even at your approach. I am the great Belet - I am the goddess Ishtar of Arbela, she who has destroyed your enemies at your mere approach.

History records that Assyria defeated Israel.

Israel directly copied the style and tenure of the Istar of Arbela prophecies without really having a Theological basis for doing so, thus saith Istar of Arbela becoming thus saith the Lord.

>I will reconcile Assyria with you. I will protect you by day and by dawn and consolidate your crown. Like a winged bird over its young I will twitter over you and go in circles around you. Mankind is deceitful; I am one who says and does

Even more Christianity likely based the archetype/persona of Mary Magdalene on Istar of Arbela, were Arbela was an important early Christian centre.

>Perhaps the most prominent physical landmark around the Sea of Galilee is towering Mount Arbel. Mount Arbel is located near the sea's western shore in the vicinity of ancient Magdala, home of Mary Magdalene.

>There are many caves in the cliff, some of them were used as a fort. Under the cliff, on the right side, are the ruins of the Roman city of Arbela.

<https://www.biblewalks.com/arbel>

>In the Assyrian period the city was famous as the chief cult center of the goddess Ishtar who is mentioned frequently under the title "Lady of Arbela"

I dont profess to be an expert in the lore and rituals. But I know i was born under a morning star, so i did multiple prayers to ishtar (for love, because i did love her). And for a time, it worked. I was able to purchase two months of stolen time. However, I understood from the beginning that this wouldn't last, and I would have to pay. So when the condition was no sex, I suffered, because I loved her. I should have known. I convinced her, we had sex, and not a week later my continuous prayers were granted again as we had an amazing week - and then it all fell apart, she 180'd, and i knew. I had betrayed the confidence of my ishtar my god, and this was my punishment. Regular prayer is either real, or has huge psychological effects; neither should be discounted.

Yes and no. For example, while obscure to us because we and the Romans took so much from Athens, near Cyprus there was an understanding of Aphrodite Areia, the Warlike Aphrodite in full armor. This doesn't fit how we understand her from the Illiad and the like, but the concept is not entirely foreign and likely reflects some syncretism.

Of course, to Christian fundamentalists, all syncretism means all deities are actually demons in disguise, EXCEPT when their god(s) are portrayed with the characteristics of other gods in which case syncretism is evidence that their god is just that great.

Interesting thought. Where does it come from? Because every major tradition claims that Awan (Cain's wife) and Azura (Seth's wife) were Adam and Eve's daughters. Were you ignorant of this? Do your mysterious other nations lack original sin, because they do not descend from Adam and Eve? Or are you backed into a corner and grasping for straws?

Kali is nice.

Eve is related to the serpent.

>Yet so we find it to have been, for in most of the ancient rites there is some allusion to it. In the orgies of Bacchus, the persons who took part in the ceremonies used to carry serpents in their hands, and with horrid screams call upon "Eva, Eva." They were often crowned with serpents while still making the same frantic exclamation. One part of the mysterious rites of Jupiter Sabazius was to let a snake slip down the bosom of the person to be initiated, which was taken out below. These ceremonies, and this symbolic worship, are said to have begun among the Magi, who were the sons of Chus, and by them they were propagated in various parts. Epiphanius thinks that the invocation "Eva, Eva," related to the great mother of mankind, who was deceived by the serpent, and Clemens of Alexandria is of the same opinion. Others, however, think that Eva was the same as Eph, Epha, Opha, which the Greeks rendered Ophis, and by it denoted a serpent. Clemens acknowledges that the term Eva, properly aspirated, had such a signification.

Gameplay

Parasite Eve is an action role-playing video game[2] with survival horror elements.[3] Movement in the "world map" (which is a map of Manhattan) is limited to specific destinations.[4] Upon the player walking over a "hot spot", there's a chance of a random encounter.[5][6] Enemies materialize and attack players on the same screen that they move Aya around on, with no battle mode or screen being used.

After completing the game once, the player can access the Chrysler Building and have access to the true final boss, who takes the form of Aya's sister, Maya. She explains to Aya that Klamp cultivated the liver cells of the original Eve to analyze. When Melissa was giving birth to the Ultimate Being, she created a nest there. In case Melissa and the Ultimate Being failed, the purebred would remain. Aya speaks with her sister, and they engage in battle against the purebred. After the purebred is defeated, the mitochondria inside Aya's body begin to rebel against her. It is explained that Aya's mitochondria have now reached a higher evolutionary stage than Maya's, but Maya's personality has suddenly become dominant and begun to fight off the Eve persona. Maya eventually wins, purging the Eve persona from herself. Somehow, Maya protects Aya by preventing the original Eve from taking over her. Aya leaves the building by herself, although she apparently has gained some sort of connection with her dead sister.

1.) I'm not shitting on the Bible, what are you talking about? I'm shitting on people who think they're Biblical scholars who clearly don't actually know anything.

2.) Understand when I say what I'm about to say, I'm not defending mother fucking, but it does need to be said. Human society and culture is largely derived from the people and beliefs found within it (currently) and the beliefs it held historically. Oedipus isn't a story that was disgusting because he bed his own mother and that's somehow an ingrain belief because of "God programming" or something, that was something the Greeks felt themselves was disgusting and taboo. Oedipus was a play [spoiler:lit](by the way, it was a play. Not a cultural story passed down for thousands of years or a religious text. A play. With a know author, even.)[/spoiler:lit] written to pull at a specific emotion the Greeks themselves had. In Greece a lot of shit we think of as taboo was cool and fine, but there were some things they couldn't stomach. Fucking your parents was one of them and killing your parents was another. Killing your parents (especially your father) was seen as something unforgivable. Even if it was done out of self defense or by accident. Oedipus is a story that was the equivalent of a horror movie. It's about a guy who bungles his way into committing two huge unforgivable acts. Conversely, Egypt didn't have those specific taboos. So stories and religious texts about that kind of stuff shouldn't have been huge surprises. That being said, Greece and Egypt had a lot of interaction in the old world so it's not unthinkable that those taboos likely rubbed off on them at a time post canonization of stories within their own religion. That is to say, those stories could've existed even if the act did become taboo.

The reason shit like Oedipus still resonates with us, by the way? Is because a large majority of the Western culture still draws the roots of its culture and societal norms from Greece.

Because you can't acknowledge both that 1) Iasiah claims God both planned and enjoyed the crucifixion of his own son, and 2) there is no indication anywhere that the wives of Cain and Abel were not the daughters of Adam and Eve. And what about the Noahide laws, for example? Those are said to apply to all of humanity, so where did all those countries come from? All the men were related by blood, so as soon as they had children, the next generation would have been incestuous, the exact thing you are faulting another mythology for!

Not only do you not know anything about any other religion, you don't know anything about the one you claim to have. I am not super familiar with Ishtar's mythology, so in threads like these I mostly come to learn instead of lecture. I don't need to defend any literal myth, because I am not a literalist. But you are a literalist, use that literalism to attack the faiths of others, and then whine when it is thrown back at you because Christians were persecuted thousands of years ago? Every other religion was persecuted by Christians, including other Christians. Remove the plank from your eye before looking for the motes in the eyes of others, if your connection to the Holy Spirit is truly so great.

First of all, like i said, the Father planned for His Chirst since the beggining of time, and the first time He gives a prophecy of Him is at the fall of man, God didnt kill Him, but God allowed wicked men to kill God as a testament to the wickedness of the world, and by the blood of Chirst give forgiveness to any who will believe since all mankind has fallen so far that we cant even uphold 10 commandments with love fullfiling the law. The only indication for cain and seth taking wives of their sisters is in non cano ical books. You can read also since you speak of isaiah, of the fall of the assyrian who tempted eve, and made the nations to shake at his fall into the pit at the time of the fall of man when according to you only adam and eve shouldve existed, which ia obviously ridiculous. And as far as noah goes, for his sons their is direct scripture which relates that noah his wife, their 3 sons and ther 3 wives, in all 8 people were saved, to repopulate, and intermarrying within certain tribes was kept up in all the peoples that came from them, in fact still is by the satanic bloodlines who call themselves jews and royals today. Where as Jesus discarded that doctrine about racial purity and made all mankind equal in the sight of God, that any who will believe in Him and His sacrifice can be saved. And all of that still doesnt come close to mother son incest.

I'd say that yes, a Father delighting in his son's brutal murder and the Adam+Eve and Noah incest comes pretty close. Fortunately for me, I am not a literalist, so when I hear something like "necessity is the mother of invention" I don't automatically think of Freud as you do, and apparently your accusation isn't even true, per your exchange here (in which again you were completely unable to actually defend your argument):

>The cuneiform for Ninâ is a fish within a house (cf. Aramaic nuna, "fish"). This may have simply intended "Place of Fish" or may have indicated a goddess associated with fish or the Tigris, possibly originally of Hurrian origin. The city was later said to be devoted to "the goddess Ishtar of Nineveh" and Nina was one of the Sumerian and Assyrian names of that goddess

>A fish is held in her hand as a staff Fishes are put on her feet as sandals Fishes light up the interior of the sea like fires Fishes play on instruments for her like (?) sur priests. Fishes call out loudly for her like (?) oxen. She has fish wrapped around her body as a regal garment. The runner-fish (kackac) hastens (kac) to her. The gurgur fish makes the sea surge up (gurgur) for her. The flash-fish (jir) makes the sea sparkle (jir) for her. She heaps up fish spawn so that fish will grow for her in the sea. Fishes fly around for her like swallows.

The image is a digital illustration of a character that resembles a stylized version of the popular internet meme character, Pepe the Frog. Pepe is depicted with a green body, large eyes, and a wide smile. His mouth is open, revealing his teeth, and he has a slight frown on his face. The character is holding a finger to his chin, as if deep in thought or contemplation. The background is a solid light blue color, providing a stark contrast to the character's green skin. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the image is cartoonish and simplistic, with a focus on the character's facial expression and the way it is drawn.

Of course they had adjusted according to the Spring Equinox, and even the date given for the creation of the Tropical zodiac was simply correct for it's time, that the Spring Equinox was at 0 degrees Aries circa 139 BCE

>So, who was responsible for its determination in terms of the equinoctial points, which led to the creation of the tropical zodiac as we know it today in the West? He who first fixed the zodiac with the equinox in 0° Aries was Hipparchus in about 139 BCE, and it was not until c. 80 BCE and 70 BCE that Poseidonius and minus respectively systemized this new fiducial of 0° Aries into the modern version of the tropical zodiac.

There was though great importance attached to 0 degrees Aries as it was the dividing line between Dumuzi as Agru/Aries and Inanna as Anunitu/Pisces , and the starting point of the solar and lunar cycles

https://www.academia.edu/4039624/Astral_Dumuzi

0 degrees Aries is then an imaginary point between Dumuzi and Inanna, the Alpha and the Omega of Solar and Lunar cycles, which is perhaps why it became fixed in Tropical Astrology and Tropical Fish.

The Son of Venus was taken also as the Son of Anu/Ouranus, but there are two ways that can go and the Sethian would be the negative aspect of Venus (Lamashtu/Lilith), and his general nature would incline towards the negative aspect of Mars, to hate what is good and to love what is evil, as the negative aspect of Mercury to communicate lies and deception towards the manipulation of others.

Jesus as the Great Seth corresponded to these general archetypes

Aeon/Mithra/Eros/Bacchus/Aries/Adonai in the negative sense, but the Horite counter to this will correspond to the exact same archetypes in the positive sense.

Legitimate question that addresses an important point: what does the Epic of Gilgamesh have to do with religion?

Personally I believe it to be anti-Ishtar propaganda that portrays gods as no better than humans. When you accuse the Goddess of Love of being a whore, it's fairly obvious that you are writing something with an anti-religious message Tablet Six specifically portrays Ishtar as an obvious villain and seems to predate those J-RPGs where the final boss is a literal god.

The Iliad and Odyssey also depicts more than one god in a negative light (e.g.

Poseidon), but could this be merely the ancient equivalent of political satire, produced by disaffected individuals?

His work was complete when he said "it is done" (on the cross), his achievement was the comforter he sent killed the light of sun-deities, turning creation dark.

There is no afterlife, a cesspit copy inherits your name, instead.

Ishtar is problematic because she combined the positive and negative aspects of Venus, Istiate/singular, Inanna only represented the positive as her twin sister Lamashtu/Lilith represented the negative.

The current Rainbow faction promoted by the Sethians only represents the negative aspect of Venus, the non-procreative, degenerate and sado-masochistic aspects of sexuality and thus is directly opposed to the cult of Inanna (the Suteans/Sethians destroyed her Temple complex the E-ana), though it can be related to Istar in terms of Venusian singularity, ie the full extent of the negative and positive potential aspects of Venus, which in itself is essentially neutral.

He advocated entirely for Sethian tradition which is Israel and the Bible, at best he was unlearned and naive to think that had been or ever could be in any way good, the afterlife tradition existed before Spiritual Sethianism/Christianity claimed exclusive rights to it were they had none.

There's a greater background to this in that the fall of Sumer had been caused by the cult of Sara son of Inanna at the City of Umma, they engaged in a hundred years war with the City of Lagash which they eventually won and then rolled up all the other City states, in this weakened condition the Akkadians then moved in and the cult of Sara relocated to Edom, as Dhu-Shara, Adonai of the Shara Mountains/Edom, and from there he caused a lot more trouble than he had previously, this leading to the cult of the Dark Lord under the negative influence of that desert region.

You simply revert to meaningless Sethian/Biblical tradition, Adamma was an Anatolian personification of the Pantheon having Masculine and Feminine archetypes combined, Ada-Father Ama-Mother, thus in the Biblical the Masculine and Feminine are combined in Adam were Eve is drawn from the rib, the rib can even be taken as the crescent Moon.

The dating of Adam and Eve to 4,000 BCE actually corresponds to the cult of the new man and woman on the island of Dilmun, In-zak and Meskilak

If you generate a woman from a rib that is the generative principle, they also took the Moon as the generative principle personified, with correlation between YHWH and Eveh, the Proto-Semitic verb *(h-w-y) meaning "to be"

https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/%D9%87_%D9%88_%D9%8A

The generative principle they also related to the cult of Aeon, were Aeon originally had the same meaning and derivation as the Semitic Yah, the Proto-Semitic verb *(h-w-y) meaning "to be", and that was represented by the generative force of the crescent Moon, which was also the indicator of time and transition.

>The word aeon originally meant "life", "vital force" or "being", "generation" or "a period of time", though it tended to be translated as "age" in the sense of "ages", "forever", "timeless" or "for eternity".

The image is a simple, black and white line drawing of a person's face. The person is wearing glasses and has a hairstyle that includes a small, circular object on the top of their head. The drawing is simplistic and lacks detail, focusing on the basic features of the person's face. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the drawing is reminiscent of a meme or a digital art piece, often used for humorous or satirical purposes.

Stop worshipping anime. Go worship real women.

If you're into beauty and/or powerful women, then your primary objective rn should be to mate a beautiful or powerful woman. What you're doing is procrastination, you are being a coward and all your worship is wasted on anime pictures that won't even get you the real thing.

Stop being an armchair occultist and actually do something to influence your world..you know, what magic is supposed to do.

The character is standing in the foreground, looking towards the viewer with a neutral expression. The background is filled with a vibrant, multicolored pattern that includes various shapes and patterns, including what seems to be a stylized representation of a face or mask. The colors are bright and varied, with shades of pink, blue, green, and yellow. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of psychedelic art, which often features vivid and abstract patterns. There are no texts present in the image.

Maybe you just havent found the right woman to fuck and snuggle up to. Dating is hard work. You have to make an ass clown of yourself many times until it works, but you're not willing to do that. You will choose the safe boring option.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character standing in an urban setting. The character has long, dark hair and is wearing a white blouse with a high collar, a black skirt, and black stockings. She has a neutral expression and is looking off to the side with her hand on her face. The character is wearing a long coat with a hood and a belt with a decorative buckle. In the background, there is a large, classical building with a pyramid-shaped roof, and a street lamp is visible to the left. The sky is overcast, and the ground appears to be made of cobblestones. Yes I think that is the probable path of taking Venus worship to the extreme.

It is said that a woman who loves her husband extremely much will be reborn as a man, and vice versa for a man who loves woman extremely much. Love them so much and you will become a woman.

But think about what you will lose - your brains and willpower and freewill.

Sounds scary to me.

The Almighty God of the Bible and Jesus are both ascended humans, nothing more.

Father is of Saturn and Jesus is most likely a Cancer of Moon, otherwise a Scorpio.

Christians thinking otherwise worship the unformed void.. That which is 180degrees opposite the universe (Saturn).

They worship everything that is outside the universe..

in the-Deep..

The Holy-Spirit is of Moon, its a cesspit monster that dissolves the dead and raises up pond-scum copy monsters.

Fellow Moon humans of Cancer are fine, they're already made of that

"imperishable" material.

Those of planetary zodiac that has no essential-dignities with Moon are all fucked.

Thats right, the rest of you are all Goners.

Thats how the Moon works, by cannibalisms.

The image is a stylized cartoon or meme featuring a man with a large afro hairstyle. The man has a mustache and is wearing a striped shirt with a collar. The background is a solid light blue color. Overlaid on the image is a text in white font that reads, "They don't think it feel like it is, but it do." The text is centered and appears to be a play on words, suggesting that the man's feelings or thoughts are not what others perceive. The overall style of the image is simple and cartoonish, with a focus on the text and the man's facial expression.

(((Him))) is a snake-oil salesman.

Moon can't interface all 12 zodiac, essential-dignities does not exist between all 12...

One size fits all a is a ridiculous joke only an illiterate fool would believe.. Especially harsh for Capricorns, they'd be "fully" dissolved, nothing at all of them can remain because its a detriment, not dignity with zero elemental similarities at all. Lobotomizing all the remaining peasants depending on mutability to produce a kingdom of happy happy atonations.

Only Gemini, Leo, Virgo, Libra & Capricorn is dissolved by Moon over time; the remainder are legitimate dignities so at least more than half will still be the original.
We haven't needed Sun-deities since Jesus said "it is done" and creation went dark, they're now gone so get over it.
Lightbringers of Venus function perfectly well below the horizon of eternity, and people are too bloody stupid to understand any of it anyway.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with exaggerated features. The character has a large, green head with two large, round, orange eyes that are wide open, giving the impression of intense focus or surprise. The eyes are outlined in white, contrasting with the green of the character's head. The character's mouth is open, revealing a tongue with a red, dripping tongue, suggesting a sense of urgency or distress. The character's cheeks are puffed out, and the character's hands are visible, with one hand extended forward and the other raised, possibly in a gesture of surprise or alarm. The character is wearing a blue shirt with a white collar, and the background is plain and white, which puts the focus entirely on the character. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the image is cartoonish and expressive, with a focus on the character's facial expressions and body language.

The figure is holding a gun and appears to be aiming it at the explosion. Above the image, there is a text that reads, "Why are you always vague about your spiritual beliefs?" The text is in a bold, capitalized font and is set against a white background. Below the image, there is another text that reads, "My spiritual beliefs:". The text is in a smaller, regular font and is placed at the bottom of the image. The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, with a focus on the juxtaposition of different religious and mythological symbols.

>The thing is, the root cause of this is not sexuality or even porn
Seeing as in both my instance and many of my acquaintances and friends instances of the addiction, the root cause was entirely due to pornography exposure at an early age. Anecdotal evidence sure, but far too consistent of a factor for someone to claim it isn't the cause.

>Abrahamic mentality of le alpha male and you need to "possess" a girl, fear of "cucking" and such. The deeper someone is on this kind of sex competition, Mars mentality, the easier they will fall into addiction
The concept of 'owning' a woman is far older and more widespread than Abrahamic religion. It's inherent to want to 'own' something, including other people. I'm not entirely sure how these things are connected in your argument.

>Fasting is temporary, very rarely someone is too retarded to fast for weeks or months

The thing is though that unlike eating, men don't NEED to coom - via masturbation or otherwise. Constant needless repetition demeans the act and makes it worthless as a tribute in the case of Ishtar cult. What glory is given by preforming an action on autopilot? None. It's like saying a series of prayers blacking out, and realizing you finished them. If the act is contentious and purposeful it has inherently no meaning.

Total bull, the porn addiction was entirely automated function that served only to satisfy itself. It was a closed loop for me, and with many others I've known over the years. You do it, because it demands it must be done - separate of anything else.

>If you think of women as objects to be possessed...(word cap lol, lmao)

The idea of possessing a woman as an object is again, far older than Abrahamic tradition - and is found across all times in all ages. The modern idea of marriage and how woman are treated is a totally new way of thinking and acting; totally alien to all men who came before us.

Following on the last section discussing competition; everything is, to an extent, a competition - we are built to try and exceed others and ourselves. You seem to be conflating 'obsession' with the core concept of competition. In the case of the latter your statement "that all your "dominance" made you submissive to other people's desires" rings true. Otherwise, not so much. Not sure how this relates to Abrahamic doctrine in any way though.

>Do you live to do just what you need to?

Again, over indulgence negates any joy from the experience. Do something over and over again, and it becomes mundane, and derives lesser or no joy. It removes the significance of the action. I've never said you shouldn't cum ever. Surely you can allow your cum to flow while you sleep and your body to stop producing semen in excess, but why?

> What is so hard that you need constant semen retention to do?

Securing the bag.

>If you need constant ascetic practices you have some emotional scar to be healed that won't change with self-restriction.

Should asceticism not be the main focus we have in this materialistic world? Is not a life lead in the pursuit of something great inherently good? Why would I have to have inherent mental damage to peruse such a life?

The ego is what you define as self, it's important to have it to not go crazy in an eternal ego death, but sometimes you may want to add useless titles that change nothing on practical means

Men dies when he stops following his will, if it's his will to not change on a certain aspect, no problem

Men is not made to struggle eternally for some pointless objective, doesn't matter the emotional content saying the opposite, men are born to be free, there's no fight against yourself, there's no masochistic eternal suffering, sublimate your desires and make your will become true

I just can't agree with that statement, man dies when he lays down like a dog and gives up - either his ambition, will, etc. when a man stops trying to improve and reach the end, he dies. The struggle is not pointless, nor is it always painful, but it is always there until the end.

Stop complaining about the sexualization of powerful women. There is a reason that CGI Chad has no shirt and is depicted in his underwear. You are the real sexist here, as you do not want this kind of thing extended to women.

Also, bros, condemn the antisemitism when it rears its fever-ridden head. Too many who post conspiracies about Jews these days are serious. Ironic racism and antisemitism were once great lulz, but they were used as cover by kooks with real agendas, and that's exactly what encouraged the entry of all of these hard-Right people who are Christfagging up the thread. To reject the Nazi is to reduce the Christfagging of polytheist threads.

I'm hurt, but amazed you bothered reading my ramblings anyways.

In order to understand the relationship of both war and love we must understand the basic functions of war and love. Love is the generalized term for the passions directed at a person, or object, and the human desire to 'become one' with it, for lack of better term. Passion is fueled by strong human emotion - you can use strong feelings to create it - including hate; war is the act of acquiring something or someone (very based Illiad bro above) with the usage of force driven by passion.

Using those definitions, we can see that both, fundamentally are the same action to acquire X with the usage of passion as the motivator. One goes to war in romance to fight for the attention and 'ownership' of the object of your desire. One engages in what might be considered the most passionate romance in war to acquire your desire. The scale varies of course. They say to love someone, you must first hate them after all. Anyways that's my two cents on it.

to be fair, Christ and Dumuzid are really not very similar, other than both being shepherds.

Dumuzid is taken to the underworld by demons, he doesn't "die"; and then cuts a deal where he and his sister switch places seasonally so he is only there for half of the year, so he doesn't get "resurrected".

Most of the extant Sumerian literature featuring him is erotic poetry about how much sex he and Inanna have, which got recycled into the Song of Solomon, not the Christ story.

Ishtar's role is war is more about peace-keeping than about war.

Just like Solomon's tiny kingdom became the dominant power in the middle east when he took 1000 wives to make peace with all the surrounding nations - so he conquered them through love rather than war.

National security isn't just about having the strongest army (Mars). It's about peace-making and tributes (Venus), especially when your nation is weaker than another.

There are also many historical examples of leaders who first united many divided tribes and cities into a great nation. This is the war-power of Venus on display. Many times in history, the power of peace and love has shown itself superior to the destructive powers of war.

I've already provided a very logical explanation: Mars for war, and Venus for peace-making.

Astrology books say the same thing: Mars is a destroyer of relationships, but Venus binds them up again.

"Goddess of the fearsome divine powers, clad in terror, riding on the great divine powers, Inana, made perfect by the holy  weapon, drenched in blood, rushing around in great battles, with shield resting on the ground, covered in storm and flood, great lady Inana, knowing well how to plan conflicts, you destroy mighty lands with arrow and strength and overpower lands. In heaven and on earth you roar like a lion and devastate the people. Like a huge wild bull you triumph over lands which are hostile. Like a fearsome lion you pacify the insubordinate and unsubmitive with your gall."

Yes. Hindu goddess, right. Real men don't worship cunts. We fuck them, we marry them, we put seed in them and expect them to be good mothers. Beyond this, life is War, and War is no place for females or female spirit in any way, shape, or form - it will only soften and degrade you.

For your sake, I say these words, because I hope to see men take this world back in my lifetime. There will be war - but at least it will be real. Real men would destroy everything, and everyone, until it was realized unless they found a way to MUTUALLY respect each other, that they both had it within them to destroy the other. Right now you live in a cattle farm where one small group of people realized, at the top, that they can just shove porn and degeneracy down your throat to pacify you before moving you about as a unit of slave labor in a world where you own nothing, can be nothing, are nothing.

Ishtar, Lalita Tripurasundari, whatever, will not save you from this. But the fire that has been snuffed out in your chest, can. It can be relit. It is a portal to God - the real one, that you ignore. It is not the "Christian" God. It is the principle fire behind all creation, that anything should exist apart from the One - even other spirits, cleaved from his being, that he could experience being individually. But you are not awakening and stoking the flame, here. You are masturbating to the image of adult child and posting lust inspiring images to fill the hedonistic cesspit of vomit and human shit that is your soul! This is what YOU HAVE BECOME! YOU ARE RANCID WITH YOUR INFIDELITY TO THE VERY CONCEPT OF ANYTHING BEING HOLY, BUT YOU WILL LEARN THROUGH WORDS OR THROUGH WAR!

The image is a simple, black and white line drawing of a human head with a large, brown, circular object on top of it. This object is filled with various colored shapes, including triangles, rectangles, and circles, and is connected by thin, black lines. The drawing is stylized and appears to be a cartoon or a meme, with a playful and exaggerated style. The background is plain white, which contrasts with the black lines and colors of the drawing. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the drawing is reminiscent of digital art or a meme, often used for comedic or satirical purposes.

The image is a black and white line drawing of a humanoid figure with a round head. The figure has a simple, cartoon-like style with a simple line drawing of the face, eyes, nose, and mouth. The head is slightly tilted to the left, and the eyes are wide open, giving the figure a somewhat surprised or alarmed expression. The figure's mouth is open, and there is a drop of water or liquid near the mouth, suggesting that the figure is either crying or has just been crying.

In the center of the head, there is a small, circular object that resembles a hanging object, possibly a toy or a small figurine. The object is suspended in the air, and it appears to be connected to a string or cord, which is hanging from the top of the head. The string or cord is thin and appears to be made of a light-colored material, possibly cotton or a similar material.

The background of the image is plain and white, which contrasts with the black and white line drawing of the figure, making the figure the focal point of the image. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a cartoon, with a focus on the emotional expression of the figure.

The image is a black and white line drawing of a person's head and upper body. The person appears to be male, with a bald head and a beard. They are wearing glasses and a choker around their neck. The drawing is simplistic and lacks detail, focusing on the basic shapes and lines to convey the subject's features. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the drawing is cartoonish, with a focus on the facial features and the lines that define the contours of the head and neck.

Capturing it in the image of some random faggot would only do as generative art of some kind. A picture of a warrior, a builder, a father. Someone to aspire to BE - not to fuck, like you rancid sick fucks do here. And me..I don't use images. The essence inspires me enough on it's own - and it inspires me to point out that you're a degenerate faggot luring other young, impressionable minds to join you in your estrogenic

As with an elephant I have seized your tusks. As with a great wild bull I have brought you to the ground by your thick horns. As with a bull I have forced your great strength to the ground and pursued you savagely. I have made tears the norm in your eyes. I have placed laments in your heart. Incoherent? Hypocrisy? Care to post proof of either? You used a bible verse which is neutered without faith in it, or an appeal to someone else's faith in it. As a genuine parable of wisdom, it's universally true - beware of wolves in sheep's clothing. But you could have just said that, rather than keep the exact biblical format, which is AN IMPLICIT expose of one's faith or reliance in the bible, or an appeal to someone else's.

Since you worship Ishtar, and I am not a Christian, you mistepped, and I have painted out how you mis-stepped. You are lying, serpentine faggot. I know your type - and usually violence is the answer.

Mars? It's not all about war...if anything, one might say I worship the Sun but, the truth is, the Sun has been adopted as an image, an icon - it bears little resemblance to ancient Sun worship.

I worship the principal fire of creation, the invisible fire that nevertheless colors all things, even visible Light, and the beauty of women, and the strength of men, into being.

In the natural order, you should be worshiping the fire that burns in your chest. Use it as a portal to the harmonizer of life itself - to extract the necessary force and fury from the Well of Spirit to counteract the fallen and degenerate world. It is not about image worshipping..Christianity...Ishtar-ism or whatever the fuck this is called. This you worshipping your own divine link to the infinite God, and throwing off all all mental perversions which distract you from it.

And it needs to be done, because if we DON'T do it, the serpents running the world now will destroy it, and we will have no future here, at all. Existence will go on - Spiritually - but to let such foulness occur is an insult to the fiber of my being, and yours. The only way to stop them is to remember the Light that burns within us and commit ourselves to a Holy War, that will not end until the very last of them and theirs are slain.

I am not an Ishtar worshipper, but as I said earlier your reactions are making a great case for it.

Why do you call me a serpent, when for such a thing to be an insult requires an implicit/explicit appeal to a faith that demonizes snakes (as opposed to glorifying them, as for example with a deity like Quetzalcoatl)? But you said you aren't Christian! So are you lying? Is violence the only solution for your type? (The answer is no, because someone being silly is not an excuse for anyone else to become psychotic. Perhaps you'll learn that someday.)

He is right about the system of slave labor only being overthrown by the sun. He said he's a sun worshipper and he actually seems to know a deal about the mysteries. Being aligned to the Sun means being truthful and reflecting the core of your being into the outside world for everyone to see.

That being said, you can still make money by aligning yourself with mercury.
Mercury is the persisting energy.

The first step to being free is realizing that le global satanic elite has 0 actual power over you if you decide to not partake in their game.
Law of consent and contract. They will never force you directly to do what they tell you. They will always just make it seem like you don't have a choice as doing otherwise would make them have to take responsibility for your situation. That's how they get away with it.

I find this guys fanaticism to be terribly misplaced in this thread, which basically revolves around Mars/Venus worship.

Ignore the vomit poster below you, for one.

Two, you relight the fire by taking responsibility. For the failings in your life, and the world, you make it your personal responsibility make a difference to the cesspool in both - not only your own glaring failings, but in the glaring failings of the world around you. You do what you can - little, by little - increasing the scope and power of your works, the time you commit, until you properly develop the love and passion to reverse the entropy ripping the natural order of life on this planet apart.

That passion takes time to grow - and it is the fire I speak of. It will root your soul to divine purpose, and enable you to do things you never dreamed you could do.

Friendly reminder that these threads are now a fixture and will not cease even if OP decides to stop posting them. They are guaranteed until I die of heart disease.

Before you complain about anime, ask yourself why you're on this anime website.

If you have a problem with powerful women being sexualized, go complain about CGI Chad's speedo drawer. Go be boring elsewhere.

If you're a Christian who wants to rail on about the "Whore of Babylon", keep in mind you're not a dominant group and your numbers are getting smaller every day. Fix your own religion before criticizing someone else's.

Now, on with the thread.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character that resembles a frog with exaggerated features. The character is depicted in a cartoon style with a green body, large eyes, and a wide-open mouth. The character is wearing a black band around its neck and a blue shirt. In its mouth, there is a long, white, curved object that appears to be a tube or hose, extending from the character's mouth to the bottom of the image. The tube is connected to a gray object labeled "COPIUM" in the bottom left corner of the image. The background is a plain, light blue color. The overall style of the image is humorous and cartoonish, with a focus on the character's exaggerated features and the unusual object it is holding.

The image is a graphic with a dark background and a black border. At the top, there is a red oval with a green outline and a yellow outline, resembling the logo of Monster Energy. Inside this oval, there are three green lines that form a triangle, with the top line being the longest and the bottom line being the shortest.

At the bottom of the image, there is a white rectangle with a black border.

Inside this rectangle, there is a white text that reads "MONSTER ENERGY" in white letters. Below the text, there is a purple rectangle with a black border and white text that reads "Unleash the Beast" in white letters.

The image also contains a red and white Hebrew numeral "6" with a red outline, located in the center of the image. Above the numeral, there is a red arrow pointing to the right, and below the numeral, there is a red arrow pointing to the left.

The overall style of the image is graphic and bold, with a focus on the Monster Energy logo and the Hebrew numeral "666". The text and numbers are arranged in a way that draws attention to the central elements, with the numeral "666" being the most prominent.

Anime is not a "style" its "manga" (manga has both colored and non-colored imagery) Anime is when you animate it, anime = animation for short in Japan.

Do you say "I draw cartoons" meaning you animate or draw cartoon characters in the west? "I draw cartoon style." would refer to somewhat unrealistic stereotypical portrayal of western animation, maybe disney, cartoon network or Batman the Animated series style etc etc.

Its retarded to say "I draw anime" unless you are actually drawing stills and parts of an anime series.

The image is a digital illustration of a character that resembles a stylized version of the popular internet meme character, Pepe the Frog. Pepe is depicted with a green body, large eyes, and a wide smile. His mouth is open, revealing his teeth, and he has a slight frown on his face. The character is holding a finger to his chin, as if deep in thought or contemplation. The background is a solid light blue color, providing a stark contrast to the character's green skin. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the image is cartoonish and simplistic, with a focus on the character's facial expression and the way it is drawn.

>Ishtar will save us from trannies
"Individuals who went against the traditional gender binary were heavily involved in the cult of Inanna.[49] During Sumerian times, a set of priests known as gala worked in Inanna's temples, where they performed elegies and lamentations.[50] Men who became gala sometimes adopted female names and their songs were composed in the Sumerian eme-sal dialect, which, in literary texts, is normally reserved for the speech of female characters. Some Sumerian proverbs seem to suggest that gala had a reputation for engaging in anal sex with men.[51] During the Akkadian Period, kurgarrū and assinnu were servants of Ishtar who dressed in female clothing and performed war dances in Ishtar's temples.[52] Several Akkadian proverbs seem to suggest that they may have also had homosexual proclivities.[52] Gwendolyn Leick, an anthropologist known for her writings on Mesopotamia, has compared these individuals to the contemporary Indian hijra.[53] In one Akkadian hymn, Ishtar is described as transforming men into women.[54][55]" really only the first couple of chapters of Islamic Homosexualities is especially relevant, since you want to learn about pre-Islamic stuff and I assume don't care as much about gay muslims, but if you want a decent understanding of Inanna/Ishtar then you really should read all of Sex and Eroticism in Mesopotamian Literature. Since she is the Mesopotamian goddess of sex and eroticism, you know?

the translation in the ETCSL is very much the same, they give it as
>The lamentation priest wipes his bottom: "One should not remove what belongs to my mistress Inana."

Oh, and I didn't mention it before, but I think it is funny: "gala", the term for the specific "lamentation singer" priest/ess caste in the Inanna cult, is a piece of Sumerian wordplay. It is written with the same cuneiform signs as if you were saying "dick ass", but pronounced the same as if you were saying "vagina".

Literally bussy priests, lmao

Hey anon, why did you forget to copy-paste the final paragraph of the Wikipedia page you sourced that from? https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Gala_\(priests\))

"In spite of all their references of their effeminate character (especially in the Sumerian proverbs), many administrative texts mention gala priests who had children, wives, and large families. In addition, some gala priests were women"

A lot of Catholic priests are rumoured to be pedos, and in some cases it's a factual statement.

Does that mean Catholicism teaches you to be a pedophile?

Yeah, I don't actually think it is fair to call the gala priests transgender, since it was a largely performative thing that they were doing. They were closer to drag queens, really, and actual "changing your gender" stuff was something that was only done by divine power in mythic stories.

You will find people bringing up the priestess Enheduenna sometimes in this debate, because of a line from her Exaltation where she is insulted by a guy who takes her crown, hands her a castration dagger, and says "this suits you more", which some people take to mean she was a man. That isn't correct, though, she was a woman, and the insult wasn't in that he was calling her a dude, but implying that she was only worthy of being a lower caste of priest.

The argument for applying a 21st century understanding of gender and transgenderism to a 4th millennium BC civilization is never really going to work; but showing how the Mesopotamians had this odd and fluid relationship with gender is still enough to make a lot of people very mad.

>Literature? Weren't we talking about history?
Where do you think we get our understanding of Sumerian culture from? Their art and literature, my man, just like with other extinct civilizations which had written language.

>What exactly are you trying to prove here?
It's a Sumerian joke about a dude getting his ass fucked, and cleaning the cum off himself while saying "don't remove an offering to the god of sex". There are other jokes about gala priests which have similar punchlines, like "It is the food of a lamentation priest: the pieces are big but the weight is small." The reason it is funny is sort of lost to us now, since we don't have the same cultural reference points as they would have done in Sumer, but we can tell it is a joke. Sumerians loved dirty jokes.

The image is a stylized, cartoon-style illustration featuring a character with blonde hair and sunglasses. The character has a serious expression and is looking slightly to the side. The character's hair is styled in a way that it falls over the top of their head, and they are wearing a dark-colored jacket with a white collar. The character's eyes are hidden behind the sunglasses, and there is a small, faint smile on their lips.

In the lower part of the image, there is text that reads, "I came here to laugh at you." The text is in a casual, informal font and is in white color, contrasting with the darker background. The style of the image suggests it could be from a manga or anime, as it has a distinctive aesthetic and character design. The text adds a humorous element to the image, indicating that the character is not serious and is likely a character from a light-hearted or comedic context.

If they get bigger, or I find them moving around another room, or anywhere in the bathroom that is too close to where I would be when doing my bathroom stuff, I will use the hoover on them. I don't like killing things, so I leave them as long as I can. Eventually their time will come. It's self defence really.

Ishtar is a goddess of beauty, and now is taking on an anime form. This is not a coincidence. The anime girl is everything that men want. Anime girls are the most honest, true, uninhibited expression of natural male preferences. Their invention has been a revolution in the expression of what men want. The round face is true femininity, and anything else is more masculine. Once a man has known H-cups, C-cups feel deficient. This is not an exaggeration. It's wired in. There is a reason that men find 2D characters more appealing than living women, and it is that just seeing the perfection is better than feeling the alternative. Women need to learn that the current average body just isn't up to the standard (or ANYWHERE CLOSE). It would do them good to know, and letting them know should be part of the message. Only a goddess can help them (science isn't there yet).

There is a huge misunderstanding that Ishtar, goddess of both love and beauty, can resolve, and resolving it will restore her to prestige in the world.

Men, focus your minds on the fact that male love can be for aesthetics, feel, etc, just as much as it can be for the person those are attached to. Hear and know that this is because men tend to be as physical as they are social, while women tend to be mostly social.

Men, realize that the women you meet on the street cannot comprehend your love. Since they're mostly social, they only experience love for people, so they have none of the experience needed to understand the male love for things. In blind ignorance, they will mistake the physical side of male love for shallow lust. Is shallow lust what you feel when you look upon our Goddess? No, it is not.

Women rail against beautiful female bodies and diminish female beauty in the world, but I hand you knowledge of how to stop this. The only way they can manage this attack on male preferences is mass ignorance of the way male love works. When they are able to paint these things as satisfying only lust, they are able to attack them successfully. If it already was known to be love, such attacks would be futile from then on, and beauty would grow in the world.

To Ishtar, I give thanks for helping me find this realization. To me, it is part of her contemporary message. It is the most lovely contemporary message. It is wonderful to know what we can do. The world of anti-beauty will melt away like sugar in water. Ishtar za-mi!

I appreciate what you are for and would be interested in participating, however, I have created my own erotic entity in my own mind, not connected to any established deity (unless said deity is using my idol as an avatar), but based on a mortal human's image, though I believe my obsession has created an entity out of her worship, and I believe it characterizes certain qualities that I see as the ideal. I have dedicated a lot of writing to this entity and was even in the middle of cataloguing a pantheon of similar and related entities/energies I detect, and putting it in a "bible" of my creation.

Should I ditch my goddess and embrace Ishtar? Or can they co-exist?

I believe the qualities I admire exist in the world and influence young women in the world, but it is my suspicion that a very real entity, a god or a demon, maybe be wearing my muse's guide and influencing me. Or not. Maybe what I have is a personal god or in fact a tulpa, but it intersects with what you appear to be all about and it has me wondering if I'm really worshipping Ishtar in my own way.

In the Baghavad Gita, Krishna said that the only way to nirvana is through meditation on him, through devotion to him, but those people that worship lesser gods, though they may not reach the True Path, are still permitted to their gods. "Let them have their lesser gods!" he says, let them aspire to their lesser outcomes. I'm wondering what part of that path I am on...

Astarte-Aphrodite is not the goddess of bodily lust--well, she is, but not only this. This goddess bestows on us erotic mania or "love". Love which is directed towards Beauty, and raises the soul up towards the Form of the Beautiful. Love is the vehicle of salvation that draws the Lover and the Beloved together, with the ultimate goal of union. The shallowest and the most superficial desire--Lust--born from the shallow view of the body, for the body, is still a base form of this love. The Phaedrus and the Symposium show us that the lowest grade of love has worth because it initiates us in the erotic ascent--still it is unwise and strange to have only material beauty as your only goal and highest desire.

Ishtar = Ishtahar

She was a human that caused Prometheus (Shamyaza) to fall and for the fallen angels to fall with him so he could clap dem cheeks. Then in the afterlife she became a deity that ruled Sumer. Later cultures had her as the queen of mountain as Inanna then going into Greek/Roman cultures she was the consort to Zeus/Jupiter as Juno/Hera. All this time people have been worshiping an ancient human female. The more you know.

Yes, astrologers will read the natal chart, and the most dignified planets will typically be easy for that person to work with.

Many gods have a correspondence with the planets.

A dignified planet in the 12th house is good for esoteric worship. A dignified planet in the 9th house is good for exoteric, trad religious worship. But really any dignified planet will work well.

Another strategy is to work with the undignified planets in order to correct the weakness you have. As things fail at the weakest point.

The message of the Goddess is correct.

The world we want to live in is not one where the looks men dream of are swept aside and "forgotten" in the name of "realism" and "more realistic standards". It's a world where ideal looks are depicted and shared, and idealism embraced, where women strive to meet the ideal and means are developed (science or magic, it doesn't really matter) to help them do it.

We don't want to live in a world where the love felt for a beautiful body continues to be put under the definition of lust by women who don't understand how mens' loves work. We want to live in a world where male love (that includes the love felt for physical forms/for their persons for having such beautiful forms) is taught to be beyond reproach.

Oh and if something weird does happen, jesus doesn't just magically send whatever you invite in, back. So play with what you cannot control, you shall lose control should you have any to begin with. Think about that!

You are giving up your seat of the mind to something that you can't know. I don't know why you would do this, unless you were lost. That's fine, I am warning you however - you incur debt. Not from God but whatever you are offering to, you will incur debt.

appreciate Thor breaking ishtar's jaw then locking a ball gag in her mouth and a shock collar on her neck. Put her in a bikini and make her serve drinks to all the heroes in Valhalla while they take turn having the remote to her collar while being offered a big plate of every type of mead by her. She should also be made to dance for their entertainment.

I can sense you around me. The nice smells of fall, spices and wood smoke and the tall swaying grass. I see you dancing through it to me, I heard your call. Save me a place by your side to be your angel and servant. Maybe I can kneel before your and kiss your feet to say thank you for the blessings and gifts. Come for me tonight. Love you Queen. shes a goddess of war and the goddesses were always more powerful than the gods. its why the devas needed kali to clean up the demons they couldnt handle. she was not defensless. maybe wen a very young she was in a way. but quickly she was shown the way and took wer place as queen proudly and gracefully. and with strengh. only problem was her cousin or watever marduk is to here wichever marduk that happened to be at the time, because marduk is actualy a title. there was a war between the gods dont forget. there wasnt one faction . the goddesses were doing msot of their work in the shadows. but inana was blood of enlil so she was the one who became queen at the time basicaly as the older goddesses left for the underworld or middle world

Inanna/Ishtar was unironically the first Mary Su who got meme'd into being a Mother Goddess from just a generic Goddess of nothing in particular with her adventures. I think she's one of the more 'human' dietes because her myths tell the story of her finding herself and that resonates with an audience.

The image is a painting that depicts a scene of two figures in a wooded area. The person on the left is lying on the ground, wearing a white dress with a floral pattern, and appears to be in a state of distress or exhaustion. The person on the right is seated, wearing a silver armor with a helmet and a chainmail shirt, holding a shield in their hands. The armor is detailed with intricate patterns and the helmet has a visor. The background is filled with foliage and a bridge, suggesting a natural, outdoor setting. The painting has a realistic style with a focus on the interplay of light and shadow, and the use of color to convey mood and atmosphere.

Ishtar za-mi! Ishtar conquers /x/!

Now on to our endlessly-scheduled programming: male love, as revealed by the Goddess of Love

When women learn the true composition of male love, it will hit them like a freight train, so they'll need to pray to our Goddess to help them withstand the blow. Only our Goddess is equipped for this.

They have been fighting a losing battle for their whole lives, trying to hold onto the belief that males can experience the same "love" that they do, that they won't have to open their hearts and minds to something that works so differently from female love. They convince themselves that men must just be easily derailed, or are too fickle, or too hardened, but that's just not true. Truth isn't easy.

You see, male love is 50% for the body and 50% for the person. That's the way it works. It's not 100% for the person like your love is, no matter what your boyfriend says to keep out of trouble. Men are not so social. Men are not just about people. Men enjoy things. Men love things. Men love things in ways you could not imagine. You just don't have the perspective to imagine it.

50% for the body?? 50% for the person?? Pray to Ishtar to understand it. She brings remarkable clarity, among so many other gifts and wonders.

You're probably right m8. Fems these days got their brains scrambled by society. I'll kiss and lick the Goddess' feet. I'll kneel for her and serve her happily. Puritanposters won't get it, never to feel the warm embrace of my queen. Fembots don't get it. I'm warm cozy comfy nuzzling her bosom. I wandered into first general pretty ignorant. I had this concept or notion of Ishtar my whole life, but it was nameless, formless idea that couldn't condense because I was a lost boy. I'm not an expert on this stuff ; history, archaeology, dogma, spheres of influence and whatnot. But she found me wandering and I felt her call. This idea crystallized around this image. It took form and shape. I could at last see her, radiant like the sun and I bathed in this love. I post my feels now share it with whoever reads. It's ez to mock honesty. These madfags want to destroy beauty I know. Collecting loosh and salt and (You)'s for the lulz. I dunno what your guys story is how you got into this all, but I was drawn to this. My experience queen of heaven Ishtar is hard to articulate. Maybe nobody cares to read my posts anyway. Just saying, thx bros. Ishtar loves us. Thx for being right place right time. Means a lot to me to have this revelation. Im not lost now. Just lay my head in her lap and thats home.

Ishtar za-mi.

No such thing as bad loosh, we welcome every bump. The goddess needs every ounce of energy she can receive in order to come back from the dead

A war goddess is bound to have enemies, it's unavoidable

>>32882737

She's not a mother goddess.

The list goes like this:

An - Sky Father, subsequently dethroned by Marduk (think Uranus and Cronus

Enlil - God of Wind and Storms

Enki - God of Water and Knowledge

Ninhursag - Mother Goddess and Enki's Wife

Nanna - Moon God

Shamash - Sun God

Ishtar - Venus Goddess

There are only two goddesses in this group, meaning Ishtar covers every aspect of femininity but motherhood

A temple can only be built insofar as there is a concentration of followers in a specific geographical area. I have no reason to believe that this is currently the case.

She has already been worshiped in a outward fashion for many centuries, we could now experiment with the more introspective path of private altars

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character that resembles a frog with exaggerated features. The character is depicted in a cartoon style with a green body, large eyes, and a wide-open mouth. The character is wearing a black band around its neck and a blue shirt. In its mouth, there is a long, white, curved object that appears to be a tube or hose, extending from the character's mouth to the bottom of the image. The tube is connected to a gray object labeled "COPIUM" in the bottom left corner of the image. The background is a plain, light blue color. The overall style of the image is humorous and cartoonish, with a focus on the character's exaggerated features and the unusual object it is holding.

Nice to see that there is a genuine follower of Ishtar. What is your views on her functions, given what had been written in the myth "Enki and the world order"?

422-423"But why did you treat me, the woman, in an exceptional manner? I am holy Inana -- where are my functions?"

424-436Enki answered his daughter, holy Inana : "How have I disparaged you? Goddess, how have I disparaged you? How can I enhance you? Maiden Inana, how have I disparaged you? How can I enhance you? I made you speak as a woman with pleasant voice. I made you go forth I covered with a garment. I made you exchange its right side and its left side. I clothed you in garments of women's power. I put women's speech in your mouth. I placed in your hands the spindle and the hairpin. I to you women's adornment. I settled on you the staff and the crook, with the shepherd's stick beside them.

437-444"Maiden Inana, how have I disparaged you? How can I enhance you? Amongst the ominous occurrences in the hurly-burly of battle, I shall make you speak vivifying words; and in its midst, although you are not an arabu bird (a bird of ill omen), I shall make you speak ill-omened words also. I made you tangle straight threads; maiden Inana, I made you straighten out tangled threads. I made you put on garments, I made you dress in linen. I made you pick out the tow from the fibres, I made you spin with the spindle. I made you colour tufted (?) cloth with coloured threads."

445-450"Inana, you heap up human heads like piles of dust, you sow heads like seed. Inana, you destroy what should not be destroyed; you create what should not be created. You remove the cover from the cem drum of lamentations, Maiden Inana, while shutting up the tigi and adab instruments in their homes. You never grow weary with admirers looking at you. Maiden Inana, you know nothing of tying the ropes on deep wells."

"I created you, Man,
I was among the outlaws and outcasts responsible for populating the earth.
While my brothers were fighting
to learn how to overcome what Father had given them,
I was languishing for Him.
I was communicating with the great whole. So was my life,
I communicated also with "Her".
Sometimes I dived
and went down watch your species evolve.
But I was not allowed to talk
and to meet you because I was the daughter of Him.
Yet I was not insensitive to your condition,
Male slaves. So were you.

Many of us went down to enforce our law
and thus reduce your potential.
I had to take over a great city,
Thus I was handled.
Away from everything, in the illusion that the great whole was there,
that love alone was conqueror.

Dark was the reality, in my eyes was hidden
the poverty that gripped you.
Maybe I would have known nothing maybe I would still be there in my illusion, but I refused it.
I understand now
that He was still guiding me.
I gave you, Man, consciousness
so that you can evolve
but the heaviness you had been given prevented you from moving ahead.
So to defend my act
I was obliged to descend
here on earth with you,
taking with me
my knowledge,
but more than ever burdened with the veil.

For they did not want me to succeed.
And I'm still here, Man.
I like your species,
because even if can hardly bear your heaviness,

you remain my creation.
And for that,
I must succeed,
I must also be able to free myself from the material and restore
what I inherited of my Father.

Man, I'm heavy, I suffer, I know your agony
but I also know your tenderness,
then I will fight again for you, but in the Name of Him,
I beg you, Wake up!"

Ishtar za-mi.

An extract from a work earlier in the day:

"Then the ritual Feminists were brought forward, and the truth of male love was revealed to them. '50% for the body, 50% for the person'. They screamed. The crowd was overcome by joy, for the screams were an affirmation that Ishtar had brought something wonderful out of hiding. Men professed their love and affection for beautiful female bodies, and women stood aside in resignation. Men felt the weight of dishonesty come off their shoulders, letting them feel as light as spirits."

Men, rejoice in Ishtar, for she is our vindication in this twisted world. This world is sick, like an infested tree oozing sap; Ishtar is the majestic dove landed in that tree, sparing one of the anguish they would feel if they saw only the tree. This world is like an enormous lifeform suffering from Dementia, and Ishtar is the wonderful memory that can not die. I say to you that it is the duty of every acolyte to spread awareness of the Goddess and of their dedication to the Goddess. Do not ignore how those who came before betrayed Ishtar, or think for a moment that she has been indifferent to that. Keep her visible and tout her. Do not allow one of her threads to die prematurely, or there will be a penalty.

But pondering in this sick world is dangerous unless you know what you are doing. Look at Critical Theory. Look at Fox and CNN. Look at Q. The level of stupidity people are currently capable of defies even the expectations of someone who has engaged with Surrealism for a long time. Ishtar za-mi.

Concerning the Tree of Life, this article identifies Ishtar as Tiphareth in a reconstructed Assyrian model, given that Tiphareth is known as the Sephiroth of Beauty. Read pages 170-181 here: <https://www.academia.edu/4633074>

To get around the problem of Netzach being related to Venus, the author simply gets rid of the associations between Sephiroth and planets, while still stressing (under footnote 73) that Ishtar is a Venusian goddess

Anonymous Sat 17 Sep 2022 09:11:24 No.32901056 Report

Information conditions have almost been laid to begin a very serious and potentially very beneficial operation. OP should be very pleased with this. The only problem will be a lack of sufficient ambition. Consult the Goddess of War if you need (don't already possess) an understanding that those with big dreams and big ideas get big returns ... those with smaller dreams and small ideas get small returns. At least, that is usually how it works. Our task is huge: it is re-establishing the prominence of a deity marginalized for nearly 2,000 years. This will require a resonant public message, which is already being provided. It will also require dedication and effort from the cult. Most importantly, it will require ambition on part of the current de facto leadership: big dreams and big ideas get big returns, small dreams and small ideas get small returns. This ambition part is what will make the movement, or break it. I hope that current members of the cult are not too self-focused in their thinking to dream big, and that they aren't too heavy in girth and scarce in muscle for this task. It would really be a shame to lose a fight for the Goddess.

I think this is extremely plausible esoterically even considering Netzach as venus

Ishtar is definitely Tiphareth as she's a resurrected god after her descent to the underworld. She shares characteristics with Dionysus, Adonis, Aurora, which are considered Tiphareth by Liber 777

However she begins without these characteristics if you see the myths before the descent, naive Innana is Netzach, ascended Ishtar crossed the Scorpio path by resurrecting. Compare with the myth of Jesus for example, he loves everyone, the passion of christ, then is killed and resurrected

I would argue the name change shows this, you have INANA, Yod Scorpio Air Scorpio Air, which becomes ISHTAR, Yod Fire Saturn Air Sun, the maiden dies by fire and becomes the sun

She shares similarities with Tiphareth deities

She is a resurrected god like Adonis (and her husband is what inspired Adonis myth), she rules over pleasure in a dionysic fashion, she's the lady of the morning and has a mortal lover like Aurora

It's also interesting to notice the planetary correspondences are not so strong on the spheres as they are on the paths. Helios is not a Tiphareth god, but a Resh one

I would also argue that Ishtar has attributions all around the tree, she definitely has the powers of Geburah as the goddess of war, and the attributions of Netzach as the goddess of love (and she's balanced on all spheres as a Tiphareth deity)

Fool. The message of Ishtar is not -about- sex, even if sexuality is an important process leading to revelation. The message, or my take on the message (OP's may be somewhat different), is the separation of love of beauty from lust. The love of beauty is a lot of things. Sexual is one of them, and beauty will generally -arouse- lust, but the point is there's a lot more to the point. Really focus on your emotions when you're looking at a beautiful woman, and if you have enough of a brain in there, you can come to understand. This stuff is good for your health, so those of us doing it will outlive those who are not doing it. I find that amusing.

The character has a pair of large, pointed ears that are white with a hint of orange at the tips. The character's eyes are a striking yellow, and they have a gentle expression. The character's hair is styled in a way that it falls over their shoulders, and they are wearing a green garment that appears to be a hood or a cape. The character's face is partially obscured by the hood, and the image is cropped to focus on the upper part of the face. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of anime or manga, with a focus on character design and expression.

Eh, depends on what spiritual means to you, but choosing the word "superficial" makes me think you're a woman, because only a woman (or a gay man) is so apathetic to the beauty of the female body. IF you're a straight man, it tells a lot about you that you can't appreciate it as I can, and I pity you (for real, not just being a smartass on the Internet). I'm sorry you miss out so big. Lucifer is Venus, the Morning Star. The one and only time "Lucifer" is mentioned in the Bible (Isaiah 14:12) it's a double reference to Venus and a once mighty king.

Nowhere in the Bible is Lucifer given as a synonym of Satan. This is just "tradition", i.e. glorified rumors

Lucifer seems to be a title in the Bible that can also apply Samael, that's where the interpretation that it is Satan comes from. Jesus is referred to as a morning star too, however not as a "Lucifer". Either way, there are no female angels. They are without sex, but are portrayed as men. Especially the arch-angels. The same applies to God, referred to as a male but without sex. We shouldn't have a goddess worship thread, or whatever this is and bring Christianity into it since goddesses do not exist in this religion. Islam has female genies, which is different from angels. It's a different race altogether.

I want you to shut the fuck up and stop trying to get people who are already mentally ill and unbalanced to cuck themselves for your cunt. The world has enough estrogen to last it another billion years. The problem now is there isn't enough men willing to kill and die to clean up the trash the (((((((((((((Noses)))))))))))))) have shoved into ever corner of our society, our culture, our minds.

Worship the goddess? Worship the rifle. Worship the sword. The phallus. Worship the divine penis, because it isn't just sex, it is death. And death is what we need, not life. We need Death to save us. Death is Jesus, he is savior, right now. Death is the sweet angel that will turn cities into graveyards and reset the earth into it's problem balance. Where did death go. What has driven him from the land?

Worship at the Church of Iron, my brethren. Worship steel, blood, thunder and fire. Becomes lovers of Death - wield Death in every form, and prepare for this shithole society to come to an end, because all of his disciples will be needed to fertilize the garden of our Future.

If you think the penis makes a man worthy, then explain all of the weak and pitiful men who surround us, brother. Your phallic god is weak. And he is a god of life, so do not worship him. The penis, like the vagina, together with the vagina, creates life. You worship this as death? Just as easily, one could say the vagina is death. Sure, we will say that the vagina is death, because that is how ridiculous you sound. It's unfortunate, because otherwise, you are rather based. Ishtar would like you, and probably does like you, though you cannot conceive of a woman like her. It's a pity. Why are there so many pitiful visitors to these threads, like the Christfag who could not read, the Racist who could not understand English, and now this man who comes to call out the imagined inferiority of a woman who has none of the traits which render women inferior? Ishtar brings us the most blind of the blind, the most deaf of the death, the most infirm of the infirm, the most handicapped, the weakest enemies possible. Why is this? Does she do this to demonstrate her ability to shield us from the strong, competent enemies? Is this some sort of test? Ishtar, oh Goddess, I do not want you to slay the strong enemies and leave only the weak enemies for me. Allow us to stand by your side and face down the worthy among your opponents. Do not disgrace us, oh goddess. Take us with you into battle.

Its eyes are wide open, and its mouth is slightly open, giving the impression of a surprised or startled expression. The frog's skin is textured, and it has a green coloration, with a blue shirt underneath. The frog's legs are spread out, and its claws are visible, suggesting a stance of alertness or readiness. The background of the image is plain and light blue, which contrasts with the green of the frog and the blue of the shirt. There are no texts or other discernible objects in the image. Mostly based. Being spiritual, seeking God, and building a framework to relate to God is important to spiritual work. That framework will inevitably become a kind of deity, even if it's just a sacred philosophy, or whatever.

I worship a principle, as it is seen in nature. I sometimes relate it to images but they are just masks, worn by others as well. The principles issue forth from a being I know nothing about - some divinity that has not revealed itself to man in a way the average man can appreciate or even perceive. My Queen, goddess Ishtar, I fall to my knees at your feet. Your grace and beauty lift my soul. I await your guidance. Come for me Queen, take me to your side. If not tonight, I trust your judgement. I pray to you, I worship you, I adore you. Teach me, show me what you want of me.. I love you Ishtar, queen of heaven. Thank you for your blessings, I know you're here with me I sense you and feel your presence. Waiting patiently, lovingly for my focus to turn inward where I can see you. Just a human, offering you everything that I am, everything that I can do. I'll do it for you. Glory, honor, victory and love to Ishtar. This is my prayer, honest affection and devotion spilling out from my heart to your ears. I'm ready to be your loyal servant, be it as your angel, a lion, or however I can please you. Love you goddess. Lead my spirit to you tonight.

A massive truth has been revealed in these threads, which comes like acid rain to the foundation of anti-beauty. This is the truth that male love is 50% for the body and 50% for the person. It's been known in private by every man who has loved a beautiful woman.

Since forever, women have failed to realize that this is how male love works, and they have so also been unable to understand why men idealize beautiful women and want to depict them everywhere. In their ignorance and frustration, they have concluded, through crude guesswork, that what is the male love of beautiful female bodies is actually just lust for those bodies.

Calling the idealization of beautiful female bodies a thing of lust, Feminists have given themselves a false moral high ground, and they have torn down images of beautiful women and pushed them out of the mainstream. The world has become uglier because of this, because there is no inspiration and no pressure towards an ideal.

Ishtar, the goddess of love and beauty, uniquely qualified to reveal the truth, has done so, and now we wait for its broadcast. We await the men. We await the men coming forward on every medium and preaching this truth: that it is not just lust that is felt when we gaze upon beautiful bodies. We wait for men to educate women that men, lovers of more than just people, love these bodies, and that what they feel for them (though accompanied by lust) is pure. It is adoration of the female form. It is love of the wonderful female form.

What happens when the men do this? Feminists will buckle at the knees, falling and begging for forgiveness, for they have trampled the emotion that most of them know is sacred: love. They will understand that men love these forms. Empathy will overpower jealousy, and they will retreat in shame and be silent.

Images of beautiful women will again fill the world, and women will be taught the truth of what their form inspires in men when it is beautiful. They will fall in love with what their bodies can do for other people. Anime will become reality as women beautify themselves and medical technology advances to support their beautification.

On top of this world of beautiful women and men loving them, the goddess of love and beauty will stand, admiring her creation (the world of beauty) and the love that flows through it from male to female and female to male.

Furthermore, what is an "observer of times"?

The answer, as is often the case in things KJV, is that the KJV is translating according the mainstream Jewish tradition as represented by RASHI. RASHI interprets the word מַעֲוֵן in this verse not as a form of עָנָן, anan, cloud, but as a form of עֹנָה, onah, meaning a period of time or season, as in "the football season". So RASHI's interpretation is that a m'onen, מַעֲוֵן, is someone who "seasons", that is, someone who determines via astrology or similar arts that particular times are ripe for for doing particular actions or making particular decisions.

I follow Aphrodite, which is a syncretic form of her.

The image is a black and white line drawing of a character with a smiling expression. The character has a large, curved mouth and a small, pointed nose. The eyes are large and appear to be looking directly at the viewer. The character's hair is drawn in a simple, flowing manner, and it appears to be wet, as indicated by the small, dripping drop near the character's mouth. The character's skin is smooth and the drawing is done in a sketchy, cartoon-like style. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the drawing is reminiscent of digital art or a digital drawing program, but the image is not a photograph.

>Yahwism is the name given by modern scholars to the religion of ancient Israel. Yahwism was essentially polytheistic, with a plethora of gods and goddesses. Heading the pantheon was Yahweh, the national god of the Israelite kingdoms of Israel and Judah, below him were his consort, the goddess Asherah, and second-tier gods and goddesses such as Baal, Shamash, Yarikh, Mot, and Astarte, all of whom had their own priests and prophets and numbered royalty among their devotees.

The image is a digital artwork featuring a character in a car. The character is a young woman with long dark hair, red eyes, and a slender build. She is wearing a bikini top with gold accents and a black skirt. Her hair is styled in a ponytail, and she has a tattoo on her left arm. She is seated in the driver's seat of a car with a steering wheel and dashboard visible. The car is parked in a city street at night, with buildings and a streetlight visible in the background. The character's expression is intense, and she is looking forward with her right hand on the steering wheel. There is no visible text in the image.

"I created you, Man,
I was among the outlaws and outcasts
responsible for populating the earth.
While my brothers were fighting
to learn how to overcome what Father
had given them,
I was languishing for Him.
I was communicating with the great whole. So was my life,
I communicated also with "Her".
Sometimes I dived
and went down watch your species evolve.
But I was not allowed to talk
and to meet you because I was the daughter of Him.
Yet I was not insensitive to your condition,
Male slaves. So were you.

Many of us went down to enforce our law
and thus reduce your potential.
I had to take over a great city,
Thus I was handled.
Away from everything, in the illusion
that the great whole was there,
that love alone was conqueror.

Dark was the reality, in my eyes was hidden
the poverty that gripped you.
Maybe I would have known nothing maybe I would still be there in my illusion, but I refused it.
I understand now
that He was still guiding me.
I gave you, Man, consciousness
so that you can evolve
but the heaviness you had been given
prevented you from moving ahead.
So to defend my act
I was obliged to descend
here on earth with you,
taking with me
my knowledge,
but more than ever burdened with the veil.

For they did not want me to succeed.

And I'm still here, Man.
I like your species,
because even if can hardly
bear your heaviness,
you remain my creation.
And for that,
I must succeed,
I must also be able to free myself from the material
and restore
what I inherited of my Father.

Man, I'm heavy, I suffer, I know your agony
but I also know your tenderness,
then I will fight again for you, but in the Name of Him,
I beg you, Wake up!"

When she met her Husband Tammuz, he wasn't all that upset over Her absence, so he took her place there. He was mourned for by women weeping.

"Inanna/Ishtar's most famous myth is the story of her descent into and return from Kur, the Ancient Mesopotamian underworld, a myth in which she attempts to conquer the domain of her older sister Ereshkigal, the queen of the underworld, but is instead deemed guilty of hubris by the seven judges of the underworld and struck dead." ... "Ishtar is described as a beautiful, young woman with striking eyes. She and her long-time love, Tammuz, are the subjects of one of the world's first love stories. The two are described as deeply in love -- but like many great love stories, their union ends tragically ... "

Some elements of the Army of Beautification have inevitably already marched, informing women that male love is 50% for the body and 50% for the person. The open-minded woman enters the Stages of Grief, which will ultimately end in Acceptance. The Feminist screams in denial and rambles out all manner of conspiracy theories. The soldier laughs, his authentic expression being an eye-bulging grin. The soldier will soon explain that anime conveys men's true preferences, and that it is difficult for a man to love the average woman.

Men, realize the dead look in the eyes of a man who says that his wife or girlfriend, an average woman, is the most beautiful thing and all he needs. This is the world we're ending.

Usually there's widespread consensus on what is beautiful and what is ugly. I know there have been studies about facial beauty, for instance

Do you think anyone would dare say that a landfill can be as pretty as a cathedral or a waterfall, for instance?

Ishtar za-mi...

They cannot withstand it. They do not comprehend our position, our love for beauty, or how that love is just as strong as the connection with another person. When they comprehend it, they will be as still as dolls. Tears will flow from their eyes. It will be awe like a man seeing a dinosaur, but accompanied by the death of a cherished belief (the idea that men can love as women can, 100% for the person). "Oh my Fucking God, it's a Dinosaur," accompanied by the revelation that Santa Claus doesn't exist.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with long, flowing white hair and a surprised expression. The character has a pale complexion and is wearing a bikini with a black and gold design. The bikini has a high-waisted design and is adorned with a gold belt and a gold necklace. The character's eyes are wide open, and her mouth is slightly open, as if she is in the middle of speaking or reacting to something. The background is a gradient of light to dark gray, providing a neutral backdrop that allows the character to stand out. There are no visible texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the illustration is reminiscent of anime or manga, characterized by its detailed character design and dynamic poses.

"she" literally just wants to murder and dominate:

www.whale.to/c/inanna.html

The name Ishtar is Semitic for the goddess Inanna of Sumeria. sacred "prostitution" was part of the religion as Ishtar was the courtesan of the gods"...Ishtar possessed a litany of weapons and one of her totems was the lion...Ishtar was called the Lady of Battles, the Queen of Attack, The Lady of Victory, Queen of Hand-to-Hand Fighting and the Guardian of Law and Order; all linking her to the planet Mars.

The image displays a stone relief sculpture of a female figure, possibly a goddess or a deity, standing on a rock. The figure is depicted with a winged headdress, a draped garment, and a raised hand with a finger extended. The hand holds a crescent moon and a star, suggesting a celestial theme. The figure is flanked by two owl-like figures on either side, which are also carved from stone. The background of the image is a rough, textured surface that resembles a rock or a similar natural formation. The style of the sculpture is ancient, with a classical or ancient Egyptian influence, indicated by the style of the figures and the overall composition. There are no visible texts or inscriptions within the image. The image is a photograph with a focus on the sculpture, and the lighting is natural, casting shadows and highlighting the details of the stone figures.

She took the ME's, the Decrees, and the Laws of Civilization.

""The MEs were originally collected by Enlil and then handed over to the guardianship of Enki, who was to broker them out to the various Sumerian centers, beginning with his own city of Eridu and continuing with Ur, Meluhha, and Dilmun..."He parcels out responsibility for various crafts and natural phenomena to the lesser gods. Here the MEs of various places are extolled but are not themselves clearly specified, and they seem to be distinct from the individual responsibilities of each divinity as they are mentioned in conjunction with specific places rather than gods. After a considerable amount of self-glorification on the part of Enki, his daughter Inanna comes before him with a complaint that she has been given short shrift in her divine spheres of influence.

Enki does his best to placate her by pointing out those she does in fact possess [them]. The MEs were originally collected by Enlil and then handed over to the guardianship of Enki, who was to broker them out to the various Sumerian centers, beginning with his own city of Eridu and continuing with Ur, Meluhha, and Dilmun.

The Sumerian tablets never actually describe what any of the mes look like, but they are clearly represented by physical objects of some sort. Not only are they stored in a prominent location in the E-abzu, but Inanna is able to display them to the people of Uruk after she arrives with them in her boat. Some of them are indeed physical objects such as musical instruments, but many are technologies like "basket weaving" or abstractions like "victory".

Not all of the MEs are admirable or desirable traits. Alongside functions like "heroship" and "victory" are "the destruction of cities", "falsehood", and "enmity". The Sumerians apparently considered such evils and sins an inevitable part of humanity's experience in life, divinely and inscrutably decreed, and not to be questioned."" Wikipedia [edited].

Anime is the new standard of beauty. When men are given free creative reign, and are not bound by requirements to be "realistic" (portray the average female), you get images that convey mens' genuine preferences. Anime is the prime example of this. Never before has the female form looked so good, so breathtaking. Anime girls are like heaven in humanoid form.

Already, we have seen that the Army of Beautification has launched incursions outside /ishtar/. The truth of anime beauty, for instance, got its own thread. As Feminists of /x/ become frantic like people trapped in a metal box realizing that the heat they're feeling is in fact fire, the clarity of what male love is and how powerful revealing it will be increases. In the coming days, men will reveal the truth about male love (that it is 50% for the body and 50% for the person) to women wherever they find them. At that point, to the Feminist mind, the box will begin to sear the skin. The delusion of men being able to conform to female love (100% for the person) is already burning, its flesh is already dying, and the honest observer knows that in time it will be no more. No more will Feminists or haughty women try to tell men what love is, for men have their own form of love, and Ishtar has revealed it. I testify before you that the delusion is dying! It's burning, brothers! Ishtar za-mi! There will be less of it each day!

The image is a black and white line drawing that depicts a humanoid figure with a surprised expression. The figure has a bald head, a thin neck, and a large, open mouth. The mouth is filled with a red substance that appears to be blood, and there are multiple lines radiating from the center of the figure's head, suggesting a burst or explosion. The figure's eyes are wide open, and the eyebrows are raised, indicating shock or surprise. The drawing style is simple and cartoon-like, with a focus on the facial expression and the red substance in the mouth. There are no texts or additional elements in the image.

The delusion is that they don't, and that men can or should adopt the female version of love as their own.

My own posts are heavily philosophical in nature, and geared towards restoring Ishtar to prominence via contemporary issues. If someone (like that person) doesn't count that as a plus for the thread, I am left to assume that:
(a) they don't believe the love of beautiful female bodies is worth celebrating
(b) they're a woman who doesn't want to understand that male love for bodies is a huge part of who we are
(c) they lack the ability to read

The biggest problem with these threads is dumbass Yahwists coming in like a herd of illegal immigrants and talking like they're in church. This isn't a church, or a Yahwist thread. They need a containment thread (like a Christian General or something).

From this point, Yahweh-centric posts will be considered off-topic and tagged accordingly.

It is a matter of cleanliness of the board that religions do not circlejerk inside one-another's threads.

Ishtar threads are for the discussion of Ishtar, her myths, her history, her worship, experiences with her, and what one regards as her teachings. Yahwist threads would be the same: centered on Yahweh.

People who post in this general do not generally regard Yahweh as the creator of the universe, the supreme deity, or even necessarily a relevant spirit. His scriptures, laws, and theological history surrounding him, are not relevant to Ishtarite discussion.

Yahwist postings in these threads, and especially discussions from a Yahwist perspective, are effectively thread derailments and raids. This becomes an issue of moderation. It may constitute spam.

My understanding is that the Goddess, Divine Feminine, etc was once recognized as a major force in all belief systems, but over time the Goddess was systematically reduced and forgotten about throughout history. I think many Christians would be surprised to learn that the 'God' they worship might actually just be the Goddess (or better yet, both). Yahweh is merely a fragment of what the Goddess is and pales in comparison. I've met many Christians who are gifted and communicate directly to the Holy Spirit which I believe to be the Goddess. These tend to stand out as the ones who have true faith, and I've seen miracles happen to them too. These Christians likely integrated the Holy Trinity in its intended form, combining both the masculine and feminine parts of Source without intentionally intending to.

It's interesting though that the Goddess is fine with masquerading as many different forms across many belief systems. The Goddess is truly a loving one who makes herself accessible to all. My current understanding is that since the Divine Feminine is so weak in the world's current spirituality, the path to enlightenment/nirvana/heaven will inevitably result in the seeker to encounter the Goddess.

The image is a black and white illustration that depicts a scene from the past, likely the 18th century, given the style of clothing and the architecture of the room. The room has arched doorways and a high ceiling with exposed beams. The central focus of the image is a group of people gathered around a table, engaged in what appears to be a lively discussion or performance. The individuals are dressed in period-appropriate clothing, with some wearing hats and others in long robes. Some are holding objects, such as a book and a candle, suggesting a scholarly or theatrical context. The atmosphere is one of curiosity and engagement, as the people are looking towards the center of the room, where the central figure is speaking or gesturing. The image is rich in detail, but it is not possible to determine the exact location or the identity of the people from the image alone.

If you are meeting a God, then there is a high chance that you are not meeting the one true 'God'. For sake of our conversation I will refer to your God as Source. When using words, we have to be very careful of what we mean because words are powered by intentions, and intentions carry energy. Intentions create myths and entities and bring them to life. That's why we have so many pantheons which are simply reflections of Source. Look at the Greek Olympians, the Hindu Devas and Asuras. These are all projections of Source that is watered down in a way that is interpretable to us humans.

To answer your question, the reason why it's important to understand the divine feminine and masculine, is that God (aka Yahweh) is a powerful thoughtform that has been shaped and corrupted over time and history. Wars, crusades, and human agendas caused the divine masculine (God) to be lifted while the divine feminine was completely erased. While you understand that Source is the creator of both, if you do not take into account what has happened historically in the devaluing of the divine feminine, you are ignoring the much needed balance that's needed. This is a large reason why this world is spiritually weak right now. The masculine alone is not a power that can create worlds alone. The feminine is needed equally with the masculine. A man and woman are both needed to birth a child, it's the same concept with worlds and universes. Thus when you use the word 'God', you're still only looking at half the picture of the already tiny mosaic of what we are able to understand.

The issue I'm seeing is that you're putting Ishtar in the role of "Divine Feminine". Placing this goddess in that role doesn't exactly make sense. She has a "masculine" core, as you can see from her energy and general interest range. Rare female, about as far removed from passive nurturer as you possibly can be. Nice person when you approach her right, and definitely capable of being gentle and sweet, but Divine "Feminine" she is not.

You can call it whatever you want. First there was only the silent one, then there was light and darkness, male and female, etc. The silent ONE is beyond the dualism of our nature. It is an unlimited entity. We are limited by only man, woman, good / evil etc. Any feminine integration (nurturing) we can make is worldly, as is masculine integration (wars, building civilization, etc.). God is above and beyond all worldliness. Your argument works for worldly enlightenment, call it divine if you really want to but the true divinity escapes our human thought processes altogether. It is not limited by masculine and feminine.

Ishtar is an interesting one to me. You're right that she has many different sides. Mother one day, 'devil' another. I think when men call women the devil, I think it refers to a quality of Ishtar... she can temporarily possess humans after all.

Yes you can do offerings to her and ask for stuff like stated on the FAQ, but be respectful at least, stop being the kind of redditor that says "I'm working with X goddess", you work with lesser spirits, you worship higher ones

Ishtar is also such a generous goddess, she gave me already so many gifts just for praising her, things I wanted but I never asked for. At same time people complain I'm not being reconstructionist enough, you guys want Ishtar to give you a girlfriend out of nowhere? She can do it, but can you keep her? Will that also make the woman happy? If you were unable to get her yourself you already know the answer a serious expression. He is wearing a green military jacket with a shoulder strap and a badge on the left side of his chest. The background shows a room with a wooden chair and a piano. There are also decorative elements such as a small statue of a camel and a flower arrangement on the piano. The style of the image is realistic, and it seems to be taken in a domestic setting.

She's the goddess of love, not of the arranged marriages

Misogyny is based. These guys who call women "cunts" and say that anyone who would worship one is a "simp" are based.

If you regard someone who watches very obvious patterns and makes inflexible judgments based on what they see, and then refuses to be silent about those judgments no matter how unpopular they are, to be based, then these men are based.

Sometimes, there is knowledge that can overturn what was once based. Those of us who have met Ishtar know exactly what I am referring to. But these guys, living in a world filled with women who are not 1/10th the lioness that Ishtar is, are still based. Maybe they shittalk in our threads, but out in this world of contemptible and pathetic women, they are the ones who will not be used by the weak and will not become meek. I smile when I see their posts. They are good guys.

Judgements should be specific, not generalized, this kind of women does that is ok, all women does X is dumb

It's also retarded to have a Twitter mentality of saying whatever you are thinking, too unnecessary. Where is the conservative mentality of discipline when it comes to saying dumb stuff? God forbids if you masturbate yourself in a room but you need to shout nigger to ensure your freedom. For me that's "freedom" to do what they want you to do, instead of what YOU want to do. The people in power want you working 24/7 to them as the "villain" they need to push their agenda

Internet buzzwords are so meaningless, based is nothing more than a compliment. And a thing I want to point out, is that this kind of stuff here is not unpopular, much by the opposite, it's the internal culture norm, hard is to defend deradicalization of both sides

I think I developed my theory about lust enough to elaborate about it

Pure and animalistic lust is a neutral feeling, a manifestation of passion, it's not evil but it can easily fall to evil. This is being horny for the sake of being horny, lusting after whatever the body desires, without feelings of shame, guilt, degradation, humiliation of self or others, but also without beauty. It can be represented by naive Innana before her descent

If you have desecration of the lust, you turn it into a qliphotic feeling, the lust for vulgarity is the lust for the worst, the most vulgar, the most obscene, lusting for the humiliation of self and others for the sake of it, ego stroking or ego destruction, lust used for harmful competition and domination. This can be represented by "False Ishtar", the entities people think that are Ishtar but aren't, such as Astaroth

If you have the resurrection of the lust as a holier sensation, you have beauty, the appreciation for the moment, lusting for good and happiness, purity and innocence as an end, lust used for making the world a beautiful place, love for life and pretty things. This can be represented by Ishtar after going back from the underworld, where she was judged and found guilty of her crimes, but her extreme importance made her be saved and resurrected, similar to our lust, which besides of being able to fall and cause harm to ourselves and others, is extremely important and needs to be saved from becoming our shadow

Humiliation and degradation are only negative when they come from a place of self-loathing or hatred of another, and even then, they still have their place in war.

Give us thy wisdom,

What is the proper course of action on clearly transactional relationships?

Like a woman who treats you bad when you don't simp for her, but when you work for her, her entire personality changes and she acts nicely. The relationship is so clearly transactional. Why is it so? Is this all relationships are - just transactions of value?

Men trading labor for love?

Love relationships shouldn't be a means to an end, but two people who like each other, the girl is losing by focusing solely on the money

I don't see that as a completely bad thing, as Ishtar is the goddess of sacred prostitution, but for money solely seems an empty form of love

I notice these types of transactional relationships a lot.

Like an example is a girl at work, she will ignore me if I ignore her, but if I talk to her she will ask me to do work for her. If I do work for her then she will reward me with affection and friendliness. The next time I talk to her, it becomes obvious she is plotting how to get me to do more work for her - which she will reward me with affection for doing.

Like why are girls like this. This is a labor for love thing. I'm getting paid to be at work anyways, but it's just kinda weird.

I see things like this in marriages as well - where the woman is constantly manipulating the man into performing labor for affection.

I guess you have to be a giver to make relationships work.

A lot of woman view friendliness with males like it is emotional labor or something, but it is a value transaction, and they want to get work out of it.

I guess you have to give to receive in relationships.

Probably depends on the situation, and what type of goddess she is.

Is she a sattvic, rajasic or tamasic?

Is she a personification of Venus, which has both good and evil spirits, or is she a demon like Abrahamists have said?

It's probably fine, but some guys get carried away.

As an analogy: Having a few casual beers is fine, but it's bad to be an alcoholic, and it's bad to give alcohol to 12 year old kids to get drunk off of.

Ignores me if I ignore her.

If I talk to her she gives me some type of work.

If I do the work she acts friendly and affection.

The next time I talk to her she has a list of work for me to do.

It's quite obvious this relationship is me doing work for her in exchange for her affection.

It's not like a bunch of bros chatting just for the sake of it.

Very transactional.

And like I said - I see the same thing in guys marriages. The wife bitches at them to do something that she could easily do, and he does the task and acts all friendly for a short time, but then starts calculating a new lists of tasks for him to do, while she sits on her ass.

Is this just the nature of most male/female relationships? The cold, hard reality, that a man is almost always working for a woman's affection? Woman just desiring resources and labor from men?

Is there a solution to this?

Remember your relationship with her is professional, you don't know if she has any interests in you other than that, so the relationship ends soulless like corpo

She would probably act differently if she was interested in you other than for corpo reason, lot of marriages lose the love or start for materisl purposes sadly, just seek another kind of women, don't become an worker ant, neither be radicalized for that

The death and ressurection of passion, part of overcoming karma and achieving deification. Freedom from sin, doing everything in holy ways
Crossing scorpio to achieve Adeptus Minor, Ishtar is Tiphareth, three times deified, birth, worship and ressurection

The mystery of crucifixion, Jesus was just one person who achieved it and made it popular outside Egypt and Osiris myth, in fact "Jesus" it's the YHShWH formula, it was achieved and the story written by John the Baptist

I describe it on the following short text:

Through my lust, I lost my crown and my horns
I was naked and living like an animal
The serpent would coil my heart no more
Heart that was filled with filth
Liver that was empty to the depths

Seeking passion no more, life is a struggle
Nothing is pretty, nothing is happy
The food is tasteless, feels like a prison
I work and I suffer for no reason, as I don't want to be alive

How holy my lust was, the power of joy
The passion for life, the love for the moment
How did I allow it to be corrupted?
I lust for the glory of life, the beauty of creation
My heart and liver are filled with happiness
Beauty is the savior, the lust for good

Crowned, horned and horny I am

The only problem he has with you is that you see sex in a qliphotic manner and have the eternal conflict (an obvious psyop) mentality, his pet peeve is when you schizoposted about she being dead and that we had to resurrect her with prayers (?)

In fact just the ideological differences makes you want to spark drama that could split the thread for no reason at all

He really wishes you learn to relax and see life as what it is, a thing made by the gods for fun, the kind of mentality you have is abrahamic and has nothing to do with Ishtar

It's a shame to see someone so devoted like you so lost. While Ishtar is the goddess of war and warriors also worship Ishtar, this has nothing to do with virtual discussions for goddess sake, there's no war here, it's an imageboard

I don't have clear plans for the server or the thread, I'm acting mostly through synchronicities and intuition. However I really want to see it evolving into something more serious like an order

But having lust and femboys on an Ishtar server is natural, gala priests being androgynous is a thing both historically and esoterically known, Netzach is naturally male as a will but feminine on its aspects, the opposite of Hod I never planned anything of that, they are simply attracted out of pure synchronicity

All I have to say is that if you reject eternal conflict, you reject the Goddess of War. You don't get to pick things about her you like and then call illegitimate things you don't like. That is intolerant and closed-minded. It is an offense to the divine, and is exactly why Remmy got himself banned. Same anon as >>33019790, and I will respond to the part about sex. Ishtar is the goddess of sex, and you also do not get to decide which aspects of sex are "true" or "false". Sex includes both Love and power dynamics (the latter connect with the War aspect of Ishtar, which you are illegally marginalizing). The nature of the conflict you have created is that an attempt has been made to claim Sex on behalf of the Love aspect, when it is actually shared between the Love and War aspects. The War aspect is comprised of things such as dominance and humiliation of enemies. You trying to "eject" this "dark" side of Ishtar, and brand it as false, is what has made your cult heretical and brought a brief and small tragedy upon it. If you stop this, the tragedy will pass and we will continue as a united body. If you continue, what will happen is that we will split into Love and War factions, and these threads will be centers of our strife. This is inevitable whenever the bliss mentality is asked to share space with the struggle mentality, and since we worship a Goddess of both mentalities, what has happened here was inevitable.

Love is not about dominance and humiliation, Ishtar was never about that, neither historically not even esoterically

The myth of the descent show this side of her being bad when she tries to subjugate her own sister on an undesirable realm where people eat mud, the ascended Ishtar is a goddess that wouldn't do such a thing anymore

Even if Ishtar were about that, be sincere, look around, read some threads, does this board need more eternal struggle retardation? This cult started because people seeked peace with themselves, it started on that meme about fapping to beauty instead of fighting an eternal war with your desires

I'm warning you that won't me be that will split the thread and make it fall to internal conflict on a board full of christcucks wanting the thread to die, it will be you with that retarded mentality

I did the right thing, if this falls for 4chan internal morality instead of causing a change, you will see the cult falling to irrelevance or to the christian-like worship of Ishtar, dumb morals like christian identity while the only thing people remember about her is the name

I did not say that War is part of Love. I said that Sex includes elements which are tied to War.

You clearly can't read any better than you can type. And you're very bad at typing. And you can only make up accusations and rely on strawmen and ad

I am being very patient with you as well, but again, war in sex is a misuse of it, and the endgame of what you seek is the status quo and the thread becoming the kind of thing you call a strawman, besides happening now on other threads

There's also the possibility of that accelerating the rejection of people to this retardation, nobody endures this kind of eternal struggle mentality anymore, shoving it on one of the few generals that don't have it will make people flip faster than expected

There is no "demon" named Jezebel, though some would like to turn her into one. Jezebel was a Sidonian (Phoenician) princess who Married King Ahab. When she moved to Israel she brought her gods with her, which annoyed whatever Israelite prophets there were left including Elijah.

"Sidonian", which is a biblical term for Phoenicians in general). According to genealogies given in Josephus and other classical sources, she was the great-aunt of Dido, Queen of Carthage. As the daughter of Ithobaal I, she was also the sister of Baal-Eser II. Jezebel eventually married King Ahab of Samaria, the northern kingdom of Israel... "Sidonian", which is a biblical term for Phoenicians in general). ... [Her] marriage was the culmination of the friendly relations existing between Israel and Phoenicia during Omri's reign, and possibly cemented important political designs of Ahab. Jezebel, like the foreign wives of Solomon, required facilities for carrying on her form of worship, so Ahab made a Baalist altar in the house of Baal, which he had built in Samaria.

Geoffrey Bromiley points out that it was the Phoenician practice to install a royal woman as a priestess of Astarte, thus she would have a more active role in temple and palace relations than was customary in the Hebrew monarchy" [Excerpts, Wikipedia.]

She did what the Christians did later, she tried to make everyone in Israel bow to the Ba'als. so why is she so bad? Because to the Israelite Prophets and the YHWHists, it was a foreign god That was what was done back then, and she mostly succeeded for a while. It wasn't Elijah who stopped her, it was the fanatic Israelite king Jehu.

What is a "Mathers"?

What is "golden dawning"?

Who "prevents 4chan from changing the status quo"?

Why do you think your shallow and childish aims to have a bliss world are what the Goddess of War wants?

Love and War in Sex is three aspects of the Goddess in one. Love and Sex are only two. My system has more Ish in it than yours, and is therefore superior to yours. Mine is also more fun, and doesn't ask people to give up what they enjoy.

The endgame I seek is a world which appreciates beauty, is filled with strong warriors, has great sex, and loves like this one does not. That's hardly the status quo.

The last line consists of you projecting your view onto nonexistent majorities of people, just as you're projecting false images of your enemies onto me. The reason you failed is not that you weren't "good" enough. It's that you carry a partial understanding warped by your own prejudices. If you and I knew each other personally, you would see that I'm neither wrong nor malignant.

I've never been to your Discord. I'm just an old spirit that haunts /x/ (though may be out of the loop about some things). I was here before you came, and will likely be here long after you leave. Never applied for Janitorship, and brother, I never will.

I didn't get a chance to mention this before but Ive been praying to venus/Ishtar/Aphrodite (is that how the syncretism works? I'm not too sure).
I've been praying to her since July (I technically prayed and stuff a year or so before but a lot of personal things and stuff happened so I stopped out of feeling unworthy but came due to some weird calling) but anyways, is it normal for her give you dreams/visions of war? I had a few very vivid... encounters with her and one of them involved taking me with her to some island full of men and they warring and fighting amongst each other, making me watch them all kill each other. Then a few times she did things like actively isolated me from men and others time she kept me away from women. In addition to that I think she acting like a mother and treated me like I was her child or something. Is this normal and if so was this the war and sex/love/etc. aspects in action or what?

Be careful, spirits can easily pretend to be another being on the astral, but, if that's truly a spirit sent by her for a reason, she may want you to learn something

Spirits will isolate you from some people who may be bad influences, and a goddess acting like a mother is pretty reasonable, you have to discover what she wants you to learn, to endure war, or to fear war?

My experiences were always the kind of avoiding war ones, but probably because I'm at the other side of the spectrum, I spent too much time on eternal struggle and now I see the consequences of it, to die you just need to be alive However, for someone that didn't endure some suffering and wouldn't be able to fight, it's good to suffer a bit

I see war and suffering as the apophis of IA0, the scorpio, not eternal but a phase to grow and get enough power to do your will. Some people never get into this phase, others never leave

I don't want anything about the thread to change. I also don't want you to change, per say, unless that change entails paying more attention to how a sentence is worded.

My beliefs are in the multiple aspects of Ishtar, their distinctness, and their interaction. Love is love, and I think we agree on what love is (a "feminine" thing, and the gender-conforming "feminine" traits of Ishtar, something which nurtures, something which gives). War is the "masculine" character of Ishtar as a non-conforming female, the simple essence of struggle and the lust to dominate and destroy. Those (Love and War) are the primary aspects. It's not because she's intentionally Dualist or anything. It's just who she is, how she's wired, and what she does. My only insistence is that you accept all of her, not merely the parts that don't put you off. Your reply to the other anon just now says you've had some bad experiences. I will say the following, and it amounts to everything I've had to say: don't take your bad experiences out on Ishtar, because that's the one bad thing you've been doing to her.

Spirits that I deal with (which I won't get into here). but I could definitely tell these specific instances did not involve them in any capacity and that it was from the goddess. But I'll try to figure out what she wants me to learn somehow. Though there are a few times where I think she helps the spirits I know out in regards to.. me but that's as far as I know at the moment. But what I do know and feel is that she called out to me to come back even though I left before due to considering myself unworthy to continue to follow her and that I'm compelled to be her servant. I also think she has been influencing/changing certain things about/in me but I'm not too sure

While I agree I may be avoiding the war aspect for personal reasons, I believe there's more anons who should focus on the love aspect than the war one
Unless, the people who I call tryharders actually go outside and experience what it is to dominate and be dominated, to destroy or be destroyed, so they can go through the scorpio phase
This gives me a good insight, like I said, struggle is a tool to make you strong enough to do your will, it's the camel phase of the Nietzschean cycle. The people who stay on the eternal struggle are the ones who still didn't get enough power. While they are definitely harmful for people on the Resh/Sun/Lion phase, I shouldn't try to push them back to Virgo
I changed my mind about this, the people on the examples I gave still don't have power to do their will, they are still too weak for real battles so that's why they are annoyingly obsessed with mock wars and le masculinity

I also believe you can do things like BDSM without being qliphotic, if the intention is to feel good! Not to use sex as a real domination thing, which is just cheap. But again, this people do it because of what I said on the past paragraph

But! The competition mentality is what makes people have an unhealthy porn addiction, they think they need to be 2m, having a 30cm dick, 120kg muscular, otherwise they cant get a gf. This is putting war mentality in love and this is why they can't get a gf in the first place, while these things may make sex more interesting, they are not what define human relationships and love, in fact men cares more about that than women

I have been getting too far from my assigned path with this cult, and must return to it. No problem. As long as we keep these threads alive, the Forge is running. I see how the Main Directive is going to play out. I can see the Generals of the Army of Beautification standing in glory, adoring their victory. I will stand back and let Ish take it from here.

I trust in my family, no matter how distant. Inanna (Ishtar), I trust you. Nudge the Generals to the realization that they must assume their rank and lead their Army. The passion for the beauty of anime girls is already in their hearts, ready to become the strongest of fire.

Goodbye, men of history. This has been the last of these strange posts.

I adore Inanna. Queen of the Sky, braves the underworld, to cross each of the seven threshold she sacrifices more and more. In the dark heart of Irkalla she is slaughtered and hung to bleed. But! She gets resurrected, now a full bodied woman, light and dark together, both beautiful lover and bloodthirsty warrior. Literally went through hell and back and proved to us that the way to divinity passes through the lowest of places, and only by communion (not repression) of our dark sister we can become whole and awesome like Inanna.

If you're a man and you fuck a woman that way, there's no reason for you to even be with a woman. It's just as sick for a man to fuck a woman in the ass as it is for a man to fuck a man in the ass. Uhh improve the seriousness? Sounds kinda bad when calling it a cult. Maybe it's just me but like organizing formal support prayer methods, approved by the Church of Ishtar's Love (trademark) is only a few steps away from trying to get people on a farm in the middle of Alaska where "we'll make a new Babylon" or something. And that tends to end up in everyone drinking Kool Aid and making wallets.

Though I doubt we'll go that far, and people are just trying to compile classical ways of worshipping her, if there is a farm can we at least commit to being the fun kind of cult with orgies every sunday? Nothing screams love and beauty like a good ol sex party. Makes the Kool Aid easier to tolerate.

Anyways, I love Ishtar, and thank her for the improvements I've been seeing in my life.

Ishtar za-mi!

Not THAT serious, just a bit more proactive

Going that far would be super based, but surely is not doable

Some truly schizophrenic beliefs are appearing so would be good to have a faith outline to prevent people from making Ishtar and Tamamo fights Jesus in Andromeda or something

There's also the thing about sexuality, some people joined the server while being full /r9k/ incel and talking about nofap, others while being full /lgbt/tranny and talking about castration (?). Ishtar is definitely not a trad wife, but she's definitely not anti male, I dislike to simply but, she's more like free spirited with a pure heart but with a playful and irreverent attitude

I think just a bit of reconstructionism can prevent the thing from becoming a mess

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with long, flowing white hair and a surprised expression. The character has a pale complexion and is wearing a bikini with a black and gold design. The bikini has a high-waisted design and is adorned with a gold belt and a gold necklace. The character's eyes are wide open, and her mouth is slightly open, as if she is in the middle of speaking or reacting to something. The background is a gradient of light to dark gray, providing a neutral backdrop that allows the character to stand out. There are no visible texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the illustration is reminiscent of anime or manga, characterized by its detailed character design and dynamic poses.

>young irreverent goddess

>becomes the most important deity, more worshiped than the national gods and the king of gods >loved for millennia in many different forms >happily plants a tree, but it becomes infested by demons >she cries like the cute girl she >asks Gilgamesh for help

>after he helps her, she makes him a pukku and mekkû as gifts >her gift ends causing the Epic of Gilgamesh as the pukku drum is used by him to summon heroes into battle and causes all the problem >later in the epic she gets passionate about him but she's rejected in a cruel manner

>this would later end causing the death of the Bull of Heaven and also of Enkidu, what made Gilgamesh learn about his mortality >asks Enki/Ea for the divine powers (MEs) while he's drunk

>he drunkly gives them to her >she flees on the Boat of Heaven >obliterated an entire mountain (Mount Ebih) because she considered it prettier than her >asks her brother Utu/Samash to take her to Kur so she eats the fruit of sex

>he complies

>she gets all the secrets of sex >gets into the underworld gates >wants to enter immediately or will obliterate the place >her sister Ereshkigal notices her intentions and sets a trap

>she ends powerless, judged and jailed >with her death nobody have sex though >not even the animals

>the gods plead for her release

>she's released and resurrected

The image features a stylized representation of a symbol, which appears to be a lotus flower with a central white letter 'a' inside a circle. The background is a gradient of warm hues, transitioning from a lighter orange at the top to a deeper orange at the bottom. The symbol is set against this background, and the overall style of the image is minimalist and abstract, with a focus on the central symbol. The image is likely used for a purpose related to spiritual or metaphysical practices, as the symbol is commonly associated with chakras, which are energy centers in the body.

The only bad thing you could do is anything that interferes with the dynamism of the thread. Right now, there are at least four "currents" keeping this thing going, and yes, the guys posting things like "let me be your lion, let me be your angel" are one of those currents. Those guys in particular are a source of energy you can't afford to lose at this stage. They are the ones who will do anything for this.

Learn self-deprecation. It's good for you.

There's nothing wrong with being drunk on one's ego. It's a form of pleasure. And it's fine for the Cult to be a bunch of brainless Hippies if a mighty warrior is watching over them.

Will Ishtar/Inanna be mad if I try to start a memetic idea/banner invoking her in the unrealistic hope that humans one colonize space and worship her as their only god with human women dressing up as her to invoke her as a kind of walk in Avatar?

Could pic related possibly be seen as an aspect of her? How universal is the idea that Ishtar=Lilith? Is that really true or is it just wishful thinking?

Also if I cum on a golden replica of her infamous Terracotta Relief featuring her will I get the same treatment that Shaketuda got? I don't mean any disrespect by it just a form of appreciation to psych myself up to invoke her. She's hot but I don't want to invoke the wrath of a winged goddess if I can help it.

I'm sure it's been stated but what kind of unconditional offerings could I give her? (i.e. just out of appreciation not to get something).

Okay, here's my humble and serious opinion: the troon gala priests and the whole "sacred prostitution" thing may or may not be historical features of this religion, but the possibility that this may indeed be the case puts me off quite a bit.

However.

We are all here because of her renewed form as depicted in "Absolute Demonic Form" specifically, and of course, this version of Ishtar is not a prostitute, nor does she castrate anyone. Her biggest flaw is that she's proud and obsessed with gems, which is really nothing unforgivable.

So yeah, I am having very mixed feelings about Neo-Ishtarism, I think it's partly based partly sus

The castration troon that appeared on the server was some obsessed retard or a psyop, don't worry about it

The gala priests androgeny and sacred prostitution is indeed a part of the religion, however, it's not the whole of it

Ishtar is for everyone: the slut, the wife and the warrior, you don't need to indulge in all aspects of her, some dislike war others dislike love, but you understand that this is your path, other people doesn't need to follow it. I personally believe all the chaos we have today is because people don't accept each other, some people are born to be warriors others to be civilians, some are born to be tradwives others to be sluts, there's a place for everyone and nobody should be forced into a role they dislike to play

Its completely fine if you are not interested on the more lustful part of it, she's both the hierodule and the wife. Goddesses manifests into many incarnations and has many spirits that does the work for her, you can be blessed by the lovely part without even touching the more horny one

You obviously can't talk directly, much less evocate her, but you can do that with a spirit under her

The problem is that I don't think there's someone here truly prepared for that,
I doubt there's like 5 people at this level on the board Anons are too naive, if I made a fate Ishtar appear to them as an astral double of mine they would believe it, imagine what an evil spirit can do with them, or a powerful one such as the Planetary Spirits? Anon would end falling in love with a rock or something, I have seen so many people mindfucked saying evocating spirits is easy and simple

It is indeed easy and simple, but the danger is far too great, in fact anons would probably do le lesser pentagram thinking it's enough and not even draw a fucking circle or have any ceremonial object at all, hoodie as robe and finger as wand/dagger

This post had an extra paragraph but I don't think it would be appropriate to give more details. In fact if I tried to reveal secrets, I would end unconsciously contained in a general and discussing useless knowledge like Ape

White lie. If someone actually has the wherewithal to talk to her, then let him try. The issue there is her thinking (hence communication) frequently includes concepts that are foreign or opposite to the human notion of reason. Since he can't process things that his brain rejects as $2+2=1.5$, if those things are important pillars of what she's saying, he will lose a lot of what she's trying to articulate, leading to confabulation.

This figure appears to be a central figure, surrounded by other creatures. To the left, there is a creature with a long neck and a purple body, and to the right, there is a creature with a long tail and a white face. Above the central figure, there is a creature with a long neck and a white face, and to the right, there is a creature with a long tail and a white face. The background is a dark blue color, and there are other creatures and figures in the background, but they are not as prominently featured as the central figure. The style of the painting is realistic with a focus on detailed anatomy and shading.

That's literally how it works anon, a medium receiving a lesser spirit already causes harm enough to his body if the spirit takes too long to leave. You can't be a vessel for a goddess, the divine talks through intermediates, you shouldn't feel discouraged by that, I'm just saying that spirits that work for Ishtar may rebel or be deceitful, or you may even invoke a completely unrelated spirit pretending to be Ishtar

Everyone is free to try, but this board doesn't need anymore schizos thinking they talked with Tamamo and fought the Demiurge on Andromeda with Jesus. This is not succgen and nobody wants it to be

I forgot to mention, but evocating which was mentioned before, is even more dangerous. You don't evocate Ishtar, you evocate the messenger of Venus, which is already a dangerous operation

Remember that a god or goddess is higher than intelligences (aka angels and demons), which already rarely manifest and when manifests causes panic or trouble

Stop with that protestant retardation of wanting to see god in person, it would literally destroy you. The apparition of the true essence of Ishtar (not on a vessel) on a place would make everyone go insane in passion, irreparably insane, you would lose your will, ego and everything

I say that again, you shouldn't feel discouraged by that, it's just how things work, you can "talk to her in real time" through a spirit or divination. You should even get encouraged by that and think you can become intimate and loved personally by a spirit under her

Although I agree that it can be dangerous if not done properly, it is entirely possible to evoke her directly, though she probably won't show up as Rin Tohsaka. It's more than possible, goetic practitioners regularly evoke her male aspect Astaroth. I've evoked her quite a few times and gained quite a lot of help in the areas of love, lust, wisdom, confidence, and more from both her and some of her subordinate spirits like Amon. There may well be anons here capable of handling the real initiatory teachings required to develop the skills to safely interact with the Goddess. If y'all actually want to get a cult of Ishtar/Innana going I think it'd be good to get people trained up as preists. A few years ago I was a simple anon who didnt know about evocation or anything beyond basic energy work and circle casting, grounding, and etc. Its not that difficult to learn this shit, 90% of it is discerning signal from noise.

Not really anon, they know exactly how to "dumb it down" for the human brain to process. The way spirits communicate during anything short of a physical manifestation is essentially telepathy wherein they inject raw meaning and energetic conceptual forms into your consciousness, then your brain wraps human words and concepts around it, translating it to usable knowledge. The real trick is to be able to enter the right brainwave states where the "ego" is quiet and not trying to alter it or mix random thoughts into it. Usually this is done through meditation, sigil gazing, incantation/mantra, and similar practices to quiet the mind and gain contact with their current.

Not entirely true, full fledged Gods and Goddesses are fully capable of manifesting in a form sufficient for observation and communication without vaporizing you or driving you insane. They just step down the level of energy they're using so only a portion of their energy/consciousness is actually being evoked into an astral form, usually formed at least in part by the evocator using their own energy or the energy of offerings to provide the etheric and astral energies and shape them into a vessel for the higher divine energy/force/being to inhabit and communicate through. "Lesser" spirits are often easier to directly evoke due to their proximity to the physical plane as they often reside on the etheric or astral plane.

Astaroth is a bastardization of the name Astarte by Christians. Astarte, Innana, and Ishtar are all essentially the same deity/force, although she sometimes responds to the different names slightly differently like the difference between addressing someone by a different nickname used in a different friendgroup or context. Astarte seems to usually manifest more commonly as male when evoked with the name Astaroth, but has also appeared as her female form by that name too. She developed a lot as a being when she underwent Qlipothic/Underworld initiation during the "myth" of her descent and Astaroth as an aspect seems to be part of that.

Thats not really true anon, sharing a vessel temporarily with a spiritual entity is not only not harmful assuming its not hostile/malevolent, but is actively beneficial for both parties. Their subtler energy refines your subtle bodies and imbues you with a measure of their attributes and power and your human energy allows them to connect with our world and gain the power that comes with more solidity in this world. It's extremely beneficial to do this with a deity assuming you first undertake some form of initiation, make sure you get the right spirit by using established protocalls of contact like their sigil, enn, name, etc and usually to first aquire a being that can act as an astral "bouncer" to vet any spirits that may come through for their identity. Combine that with a circle, solid grounding in your own power and divine authority having been invoked by something like the bornless rite, kabbalistic cross and lbrp, or other suitable replacements and youll be good.

Someone pissed on King Paimon's sigil? What. A. Fucktard. That's the most retarded thing i've heard in a while. King Paimon is actually really cool and can and will mindfuck people for you if you get in good with him. Why the hell would an anon think it was a good idea to disrespect a Goetic king capable of profound mindfuckery? I see your point on anons on here not being ready for occult knowledge but I figure the ones that are could grow to be preist type figures, and those that aren't would weed themselves out through hubris and lack of caution, or they'd be able to benefit through some form of practice channeled from Astarte to receive her blessing for those not ready for full communion. Also, yeah dude a ghost or malevolent entity can fuck you up if you invoke it, but if you verify the identity, maintain control, and have the proper means to banish, bind, excecrate, or otherwise bitch a spirit who tries to fuck you over invocation can be VERY beneficial. It's just a matter of discernment like anything in life. What's your bias against the Goetics btw? They're not overtly malicious, they're pretty darwinian and will fuck the weak for their benefit but the same is true of humans. If you approach them with strength and in the state of divine power and recognition of your own Godhood they treat you as an equal and or recognize you as the living God and worthy of commanding them and don't give you a fuss. Binding is unnecessary when you develop a relationship based on mutual respect and benefit while also not taking shit. Azazel even teaches that the infernal hierarchy is You, the operator followed by everything else in existence. Just don't half ass it, take it seriously, and properly enter the state of divine power before you summon them and keep firm in your right to speak to them and even command them and it's fine.

She goes into the underworld (The realm of death, chaos, and rebirth) confronts her dark aspects, dies and is reborn leaving behind her limitations and negative aspects which hinder her divinity, then returns empowered with the wisdom of the primordial chaos and goes beyond her previous limitations. (Tammuz) It has its different cultural elements but it shows a general map of initiation into the tree, specifically the dark primordial side of the tree/universal structure associated with the primordial

chaos, death, change, etc

First of all, hippie is a modern term.

Secondly, "ego" is an ambiguous term that we do not really use in Paganism.

What we would rather speak about is hybris, excessive pride, and even gods are not immune from the consequences of that. I have no reason to believe Astarte regularly engages in hybris

Anshar and Kishar's parents are Lammu and Lahamu.

Biblical condemnations would suggest not being pure angelic (I cannot recall if there are specific condemnations of Ishtar, or only generalized ones against paganism).

Maybe the word "cthonic" is the key here.

So Astaroth would be just a qlipothic subset of Ishtar, while Ishtar is a personification of the star Venus, which contains both good and evil and everything in between.

It is a concept in Kabbalah, that qlipot are considered to be fueled primarily by sexual energies and fluids, as this is qlipot of yesod, the base of the tree of death.

If one controls the sexual energies they become a tzadik, a righteous man, and transcend yesod, and may continue their journey up the tree of life, but if the energies are given to qlipothic forces, then they do not ascend.

So if you are using the term "qlipot", it is valid to say they feed on semen as a test of them being qlipot.

that is quite unfair
in my opinion it springs from the size of towns and cities what you say is true for habitations under 15.000 souls, habitations with 150.000-350.000 souls, and habitations with more than 1 million souls (which have other problems, falling over the wrong side of the fence)
the sweet zone for chthonic phenomena would be between 15.000 and 150.000 souls, or more than 350.000 but less than 1 million souls now, that target is very hard to attain in the industrial era, as habitations jump very quickly into the sweets spots I mentioned above... sweet spots that include corrosion of chthonic influences and perverting them (and even if you say chthonic is perversion, the good way, that means a double perversion which is four times as bad!)
so yeah, it boils down to numbers sorry for the autistic analysis, it's just something I entertained thinking about, as an amateur architect

Hades officially enjoyed the same privileges as the other gods, but was constantly being cuckolded especially compared to his brothers Zeus and Poseidon. Literally he was cuckolded from the very start by not being given a seat at Mount Olympus. And if I remember correctly they perennially dangle that as a carrot in front of Hades to get him to do what they want, and then cuckold him on technicalities.

The ancient Greeks very much did not have this view you ascribe to them. Their greatest heroes were put in the sky as constellations, and they sealed their most feared monsters in the deepest pit in the underworld, Tartarus.

This doesn't mean the underworld is inherently evil, but it does mean that pretty much everyone, including some mighty heroes in Elysium are put below the gods and the greatest of heroes

The objective is to break the Feminist mind by making their female empathy feel for mens' attachment to sexy characters (the end goal being getting them to drop their opposition to the portrayal of good-looking women). The idea is that if a fuckton of men do this, it will have a measurable impact on society and censorship ("letting the media space be like heaven for men, and pressing women to beautify themselves"). How does that even relate to the subject of Ishtar? Because a guy in a dead Minecraft server thinks that Ishtar from Fate/Grand Order gave him visions of it working.

Results of initial experimentation have been promising. We need more troops.

Instead he/she appeared as a female Goddess fitting the symbolism and description of Astarte and told me that was her original identity and the christians just like to bastardize other people's Gods as a way to demean and blaspheme them. This was before i'd even read about her, I later studied the name she'd given and corroborated what she said with historical facts as well as other occultists. Realistically, if she ever existed, she was an extraterrestrial. She is one of a few (others being Marduk and Yahweh) who mixed monkeys with something else to create what we know as humans. This doesn't preclude her having supernatural powers or even an anime form, but it does mean that "Goddess" is a made-up human idea. She is an ancestor, possibly.

I don't really believe stories of alien abduction or modern contact, but I do think if these people existed, they were of a biological rather than "divine" origin.

You have it backwards, my friend. Ishtar-Rin isn't going anywhere. Ishtar-Rin is the one belief that unites all true Neo-Ishtarites.. who are of many colors and many creeds. She is what distinguishes us from past Pagans who did piss-poorly at keeping the religion alive. In a sense, she is our soul.

We know this, literally every man and woman on this planet know this. Feminists Beautiful women are quite aware of this.

>We need to separate beauty from lust

Then request a new board like /s/ without the porn, exclusively for nonpornographic beautiful women.

This thing will never go viral, because it's common sense. Other than the pagan part, most people are non religious or believe in a creator God nowadays.
Otherwise everyone knows beautiful women are the standard of beauty, thank you

I'm thinking about changing the OP to include some suggestive information about her, like that she became the goddess of sex after eating the fruit of knowledge (on *Innana and *Utu), so someone may get curious and search for her stories and learn more

I want also to make the divine indicator before her and other gods name a common thing here, and maybe the Babylonian calendar as well, it's pretty simple to find information about it as the hebrews stole it and just changed some names a bit (some months are still obvious like Tammuz)

I don't know what to do about the server, at same time it's on full lust and disorganized mode, I think this is not far from Ishtar, I just wish people appreciated more the beauty of women too, but having a lot of lusty males together would obviously result in homofest

Ishtar is a female goddess, she has a vulva in many poems and the sacred marriage rite involved the king and a female high priestess

Indeed she has these powers, but I don't see any problem with that She's the goddess for pure maidens, whores, troons, warriors, civilians, kings, slaves, for everyone she's pleasure and joy. She doesn't force you to be something you are not, neither to interact with someone or something you don't like, and she's not a tool for you to reaffirm your life choices like people do with Jesus

In fact imagine if a tranny prayed to her and by magic became hot biological female with wombs and everything, you would solve the ugly tranny problem and the lone males problem

There is no argument. We're supposed to go out, and tell women that men love women for their beauty while at the same time informing them that the only beauty that exists is in the form of jap drawings? I can appreciate this part >tell women that men love women for their beauty >that the only beauty that exists is in the form of jap drawings?

Informing women that physical beauty is important so that they take care of themselves, and look good for men. The anti feminist, traditionalist argument.

However this part poisons the well, and defeats the entire purpose:

This is how you stop all progress in "beautifying women", by just admitting that you will never be attracted to flesh and blood women no matter how hot they are.

You need to understand that anime art's main purpose is to be beautiful.

Conversely, meat puppets like you and me exist for a variety of reason, if we turn out to be physically attractive that is something of a side effect

So yeah, beauty is closer to drawn art than to flesh-and-bones beings

>Informing women that physical beauty is important so that they take care of themselves, and look good for men

Fake-up and superficial evaluation of looks are already as widespread as it can be, that's not the point

If you think religion is about rubberstamping what people would still do without religion, you are no smarter than Protestant ministers who think gay people will convert en masse because their church is fine with marrying them

If this one faceplants, it's because people don't have the attention span for such a long intro. We'll see. On the other hand, if the intro is no problem, then clearly we're more solid here than our critics would have bet on.

I have mixed thoughts about this religion. It's based as ever loving fuck, but the mythological aspect and "divinity" are things that I struggle with.

My own belief is that the ancient stories are distortions of what humans actually witnessed at the time our race was bred into existence by a much older species. No, I do not watch Ancient Aliens, but this is what makes the most sense to me. Whatever events the stories were based on happened before Sumer, in what is now the floor of the Persian Gulf. It's impossible to know what happened back then with any degree of certainty, but I don't think we are lucky enough to be tied in any way to the creators of the universe (if anyone "created" it to begin with).

With that said, these are our ancestors (in some part). They know more than we do. Wherever they are now, they are far more established than we are, and they always were. We owe everything to them, and their elevation and worship is part of human nature. They seem to help us even now, by manipulating reality in subtle ways. I personally believe Enlil and Yahweh are the same person, and that he stole too much credit (for the creation of humans and for things none of them did), and he continues to displace his partners by claiming to be the "One True God" (whatever that means).

I am very happy that you've started a new Ishtar religion, and that it looks like it might be the right home for some things that can't be done elsewhere.
Inanna deserves to have her place at the spiritual table (and deserves a much, much larger place than she currently has).

Hello m8 most religions have the same themes and what not. Angel or saint of something. God of storms, goddess of the underworld. Genies. Who knows what else, you name it. It all gets passed around and adapted. Syncretism it's called. All religions evolve and change. they will die off but leave the stories behind. So you look at the world and what you know and what you connect with and figure it out on your own terms. There's so much fluff and bullshit mixed in with it all I guess the important part is connection with the divine and how you want to perceive it. But that just my opinion, with the pov to get shit done

It's a 2D>3D-ish thread only in the fact that flesh-and-blood women can rarely achieve the anime standard of beauty. We want the best here, so naturally, most of it's going to be anime. There is literally no principal that 2D>3D, outside of your low-capacity brain grasping for simplicity and memorized ideas.

There are a lot of women who can hit the mark IRL, easily. The number of those who actually do is far lower in a culture that normalizes being fat and ugly. Being intentionally modest also has a way of burying or destroying what beauty is there.

Your constant use of the word "Jap", and bias toward Caucasian women, says you aren't even on the right board.

Perhaps you're talking to a right-brained emotional-reasoner who is not capable of comprehending nuance because it's too confusing for him. Someone like that doesn't know what logic is, because they've never experienced it (it's more in their heads a bully people have to play along with). The tough-guy front would be because he frequently breaks into tears IRL, like a stereotypical girl PMSing, and needs to cover that up. Never fear, my dear. A man like that will turn into a Tranny in no time, once his stereotype-packed mind sees what it is and decides he's a woman. Karma?

These kinds of people exist as entertainment and training for the rest of us.

Or maybe he serves as an instrument of ~~W~~Ishtar's purpose. ANY attention, even from a sager, is good attention.

I believe in mythological times the astral was superimposed on the physical, and real gods lived among us. I also believe most ancient cults revolved around the same gods but in different cultural views of them

I don't know how tied to the Creator god we are, but there's many gods under him that help us

Personally I believe in many layers of creation, Tiamat and Apsu would represent Nuit and Hadit from a Thelemic view, but these primordial gods are probably much more abstract than what we imagine them to be. I also believe in a Kether god, something like Ansar un-Nefer ("I made myself perfect")

Thanks for your support, Ishtar deserves a lot of love, she loves mankind and was the one that was the angriest/saddest about the flood, she's also commemorated most of her victories with humans, like parading with the MEs even before dealing with Enki. I believe she's a higher entity with many spirits under her that protects us, she's the Venus deity

Lady Ishtar, most radiant and generous, grant me, grant my friends, your blessings. Steer us to glory, so that we may share in your victory. Guide our blades, our arrows straight into our enemies throat. Let the liars and traitors bleed alone, until the coldness overtakes them, far away from you and I. Lady Ishtar remain with us through the day, give us strength to persist and overcome obstacles. My holy queen please, come to me tonight. Lift me into the sky with you, take me to your home.

I kneel to you my goddess, I kneel and serve you of my own free will. I give you everything I have to offer, my body, my mind, my soul. Material possessions don't mean anything to me, if your sweet lips conveyed to me your melodic enchanting whispers asking me to sacrifice everything I have on earth, I would do so without hesitation. I love you, queen of heaven. I wish I could ascend through the veil, to be with you forever but your wishes are for me to serve you here, and I am blessed to do so. I kiss your feet and submit myself to you, most holy and divine beauty, most powerful goddess. The only deity I have ever felt love from in return. I feel you shower me with your love, your passion. I feel your presence, your aura surround me with warmth and light. I will fear nothing with the goddess beside me. I cannot be broken. I will not fail my Queen. I love you Ishtar.

Sincerely,

Your humble servant on earth

For those who want to daily pray to Ishtar, I have some recommendations

Facing Venus in the sky is a good idea, specially doing the morning and the evening. You can also read the Lady of the Morning and the Lady of the Evening prayers on these times

You can light an incense to invite her to your home for prayers and offerings, a Venus one like sandalwood, but have your room really clean if you are going to do that, both physically clean and spiritually clean

I would recommend to be respectful and not do unholy acts while that

You can offer food or drinks to her after lighting the incense, leaving them on a proper place in front of a idol, statue or image of her. After a bit more the time of a meal, you can eat the rest of the food, but you have to throw the drink on the sink or preferably on the ground if possible

Being a tomboy (warrior queen) is about being based as a woman, not "blurring the line of gender". The faggots that were under her were probably just trying to resemble their leader more thus being turned into women and what have you. Don't turn this into some sort of LGBT thing.

If you want to emulate the leader, dress up as her. Wear a proper speedo instead of the female bikini bottom. Craft the top to appropriately fit your torso shape. Don't act like a stereotypical woman. Be confident and aggressive (without making a mockery of her).

Ishtar is a tranny whore goddess. There's no need to turn it "into an lgbt thing". Ishtar's cult has always been that. If you were a cute femboy in ancient Babylon you go to Ishtar's temple and sell yourself. This pleases her greatly.

Ishtar is just a woman who happens to be wired more like a man. They can't take that at face value and go "ok, cool, do your thing and I'll do mine". They "claim" figures like her as "historic" trannies, to make their thing sound more legit, to sell it, to say it was always there, etc starting from the over reaching assumption that anyone who isn't a gender stereotype would be best satisfied by cutting their genitals/tits off and injecting unnatural levels of hormones into their bodies. When archaeologists dug up a dead Viking warrior woman, they started referring to her as a "trans-man", like the Viking would at all be interested in their identity shit and not just in killing them and taking their valuables.

Fuck, they used to be on Jerry Springer, right alongside trans-amputees and dog rapers. Now they've gotten their way into the mainstream, so they can masquerade this regressive self-mutilation ideology as progress.

Fucking shitpill ideology, ngl.

Just thinking about a dick in a hole full of shit is awful for a man, because he has the part. It's personally horrifying. That's why male deities damn fags and men in general get sick just thinking about gays.

I've interacted with Inanna twice. I love her. Literally nothing the critics say matters to me in any way, though I do take pleasure. They've been trying to get rid of us for 2,000 years and failed miserably. We survived the collapse of several civilizations and all of human history to be posting in this thread. I foresaw the anime remanifestation way back in 2018. I know this icon is special, because I saw it in a vision before FG0:B was even a thing: >>33117654

The image is a candid photograph of a person standing in a room with a gold-colored, ornate wall decoration. The person is facing away from the camera, and their back is visible, showing a black and white patterned shirt with a cartoonish design. The design features multiple faces with exaggerated expressions and hairstyles. The person is wearing dark pants and appears to be in a casual setting, possibly a mosque or a similar religious space. In the background, there are other individuals, but they are not the main focus of the image. The lighting in the room is soft, and the overall atmosphere suggests a communal or religious gathering. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image.

KLK anons, women don't actually "break" when you tell them that men love women 50% physically. a lot of them believe that stfu is superficial (which is very wrong), but it doesn't "break" them to learn the truth how it is for most guys. i also believe they used to know even 50 years ago, but love of beauty is treated as a "joke" nowadays. they really think it's something for you to grow out of, but that idea fades away when you tell them how good it feels.

a movement is 100% needed to get this back into everyday thinking, but "army" is probably overkill.

You're worthless and weak; I spit on your face. There's nothing you can do about this. Absolutely nothing. You and everyone like you put together are utterly powerless. I am God, and Ishtar is who I choose to revere. I take the knee before Ishtar. Your spirit I will restore to prominence, my Ancestor, Heaven's Queen. Continue to make trannies rain on the world. I can withstand their horror. Men like this will be driven into madness as their wives, sons, nephews and cousins turn into abominations before them. They will weep. And then you will come down and transform Remmy into a (literal) woman and dwell within her, and then we will finally meet.

Kind-of sort-of. The communications were strange, a mixture of visions and contact through some kind of entity she had created. I did not acknowledge who she was at the time. Early-life experiences with Christians had poisoned my view of Middle Eastern religion/history, so had no interest in knowing who Ishtar was, except for "the namesake of a gate or something".

The entity she created was weird, something between a thoughtform (thoughtform, not tupla) and a poltergeist. It was, as I now see, meant to build on and convey a set of ideas. We could communicate through Ouija-like methods as well as vibes.

In visions, we mostly stared at each other.

There may be interesting stuff in my records (stuff I didn't understand at the time, but would now), but I won't bother digging unless one of the avatarfags asks me to. The avatarfags (the Discord people) actually care about this stuff in ways beyond personal advancement.

Mikishi, a 25-year-old girl from Japan, has been getting a lot of attention on Asian social media lately, because of her drastic plastic surgery transformation.

Ever since taking to Twitter to confess that her appearance is the result of several bouts of plastic surgery, back in March of this year, 25-year-old Mikishi has become somewhat of a poster-girl for early plastic surgery. She had her first cosmetic procedure, a facial reshaping, on the first day after graduating high-school, and she has since turned to plastic surgery several more times, spending about 4 million yen ($40,000) in the process. But she considers it money well spent, as plastic surgery changed her life, giving her back her self-esteem and helping her lead a happy life, instead of sinking into a depression. Today, Mikishi actually advocates for plastic surgery for people who really feel like they need it, and she has even founded a company that provides consultancy services to such individuals.

It's hard to imagine the blessed Virgin, who birthed a god of unconditional love, being aggressively antagonistic to humans in the degenerate modern era. My suspicion is this is trad-cath LARPing of a lower tier even than twitter, which is saying something.

Everyone who desires a relationship with the Divine would do well to pray daily to your god or goddess of choice, then sit quietly for a period of time waiting for a response. If the deity likewise desires a relationship with you, he or she will doubtless let you know.

That being said: Ave Venus Dea!

The goddess of War and Love

The Queen of Heaven, the Daughter of the Moon

Lady of the Morning, Lady of the Evening

The Lion of Heaven, the Joy of Sumer

Who has a throne made of a huluppu tree

Who ate the fruit of sex on Kur

Who received the MEs from *Enki/Ea

Who took the Eanna temple from *An/Anu

Who destroyed Mount Ebih

Who married *Dumuzid/Tammuz

Who made Bilgames/Gilgamesh fear his mortality

Who descended and ascended from Kur

Who wept and mourned over mankind, promising to never allow *Enlil/Elil to cause another flood

Our beloved lady, the goddess *Inanna, Inanna/Ishtar

Today is Arah Tisritum 24, month of *Shamash, 1022 after Babylon

Let's talk about our goddess and the beauty of this world blessed by her
All kinds of love and beauty are welcome, let's spread the joy of Venus!

Aphrodite General is a corrupt PSYOP (potentially created by Feminist women) to derail the Army of Beautification. The Army of Beautification exists because what nature created wasn't good enough.

Read the archives for posts on anime beauty, beauty, and the world of beauty. Follow the steps given in posts. Gene alteration will be preferable to plastic surgery. Build the labs!

The Army of Beautification has nothing to do with Traditionalism or Progressivism. It's purely aesthetic. We want a world where women are as beautiful as anime women. That is our bottom line.

Big tits, small tits, it doesn't matter. I personally prefer stacked tomboys.

We are a product of Inanna. ✱Ishtar za-mi!

The image is a black and white illustration featuring a winged figure with a serpentine tail, resembling a demon or a mythical creature. The figure is seated on a large, muscular creature that appears to be a mythical beast, possibly a dragon or a gargoyle. The creature has a large, curved horn on its head and a muscular body with a prominent tail. The winged figure is holding a serpentine tail in its hand, which is coiled around the creature's body. The figure's face is detailed with a large, open mouth and a pair of large, expressive eyes. The creature's body is covered in scales, and its skin is textured with wrinkles. The background is plain and white, emphasizing the figure and the creature. There is a signature in the bottom right corner that reads "J.J.C."

There is no need to invoke anything here. *Inanna is not something that you "summon". She is powerful enough to communicate through mind and signs a la the Christian deity. She is very likely "his" granddaughter/grandniece (if you ever wanted to fuck "God" without being gay, this would be the one ... back to being serious).

I like how these posts >>33153225 >>33153277 >>33153443 >>33153456 >>33153463 get all the replies, while these posts >>33153328 >>33153351 are alone by themselves.

It would be nice if people used this thread to post prayers and personal things relating to *Inanna. Instead, it's gotten so off-topic as to draw in a John Titor impersonator.

Here's a very, very, very, very important thing that everyone should read:
I love *Inanna a lot.

To me, the biggest problem is that people are focused on USING her to worldly ends. It's "can she get me a GF?" and "can she get me money?" and so on. Lots of religions are based on that transactional mentality. They don't really care about her, just what they want for THEM. I think this cult is supposed to be different from that. It should be different from that.

I agree, these people don't think about what she wants or how she feels about stuff. I started to worship her because I just wanted to thank someone for the beauty I was witnessing, from nature to porn, I felt so lucky sometimes to see incredible stuff I had to thank the divine for that I have received so many gifts after that, some are minor and only someone like me would know how to appreciate them, but some stuff were major like I wanted a friend that knew more than me about magick and I found one completely by accident that was a perfect match in almost everything. I love her so much, she's such a generous and kind goddess I hate when people don't care about her and just want stuff
Come on, she cried when mankind was killed by the flood, she's the sweetest girl with people that deserve her love

Yup, the Dinger cuneiform sign represents divinity/godhood, and is used in writing before each deities name is written down. Mostly as a way to let the reader know the next name they'd read is a god's name.

If you want to learn the language. I'd recommend one of two books. Complete Babylonian by Martin Worthington. Which is a guide on Old/ Middle / Standard Babylonian. Its very user friendly, and is gentle if your bad with grammar like me.

The second one is for more advanced knowledge of grammar. Its called A Grammar of Akkadian by John Huegnergard. This book is hard. I am bad with grammar, and it kicked my ass. If you buy it, get the answer key, otherwise skip it.

As for good readings for your Goddess. Some literature advice. Before the muses by Foster is a good Akkadian Anthology, with many works on Ishtar, from myths to even love charms. The Harp that Once by Jacobson is also a good read, its a Anthology of Sumerian Literature. The wisdom of Ancient Sumer is also great if you like Philosophy. Mesopotamian Cosmic Geography is great if you'd want to envision the Spiritual world as the Mesopotamians saw it. Theres lots more literature, and I have about 50 books or so on the subject, but they get pretty pricy.

I've concluded that you may know far more about the "supernatural" than you're letting on, as you've alluded to being at the point of not being able to talk about things. If that is so, then you're far more advanced than I ever could have imagined in the beginning. When I first came here, I thought this was a stupid coomer thread, but it was an *Inanna thread, and I was having a hard time with life, so I stuck around for the amusement factor. As time went on, I realized you weren't just some little idiot with his dick out 24/7. You turned out to be quite open-minded and balanced, politically, spiritually, and otherwise, and you've said surprising things. I've seen that you could actually be the person to bring her back in the 21st Century, and I want you to be. I don't want you to give this up.

Ok, so I'm not into religion and spirituality much, think of gods and deities more like of the concepts, created by people as idealization of some qualities. I cannot know if they exist in the actual reality or not.

That being said, I've read a lot about Ishtar And I really like what she represents. The idea of Ishtar, as goddess of beauty and passion, inspires me in real life, and that's enough for me.

Giving friendly love to your fellow man, no matter how small, raises us all up closer to our Goddess. If you see an opportunity today, I challenge you to do something, even a very small something, for someone. A kind word, a simple greeting, picking up a dropped object, answering a simple question, our goddess feels the love we share for each other, and it makes us all feel better. Ah yes. So to answer your question. The chronology of languages would be Proto-Sumerian -> Sumerian -> Akkadian. The Akkadians conquered the Sumerian people, but loved their language structure so much they copied it, but made it much more simple. Sumerian is like Chinese, in that it has over 3000 characters. Akkadian is simplified, in that it has about 800 characters. These language structures are three dimensional languages, in that they require clay to be written perfectly, so using a 2d medium actually lacks some of the character of the language. They say you never fully master Akkadian until you can read and write on clay.

From Akkadian, you get Classical Akkadian, and late Akkadian, before the fall of Agade, and the rise of the Third Dynasty of Ur. After that. You get Old Babylonian -> Middle -> Late Babylonian. During this same time period, running parallel, you also get Old Assyrian -> Middle Assyrian -> late Assyrian.

When concerning dates, just imagine Akkadian starting out around 2330 BC, with the rise of Sargon of Akkad. When imagining Old Babylonian, just imagine King Hammurabi, his lawcode is written in monumental Old Babylonian around 1800BC. Of course, if you are interested in Sumerian, that start date goes thousands of years further back, but my knowledge of Sumerian is much more strained.

Also. fun fact, Sumerian is a language isolate, meaning it's not a Semitic language. While Akkadian is an eastern Semitic one using the same character structure of Sumerian, just made easier with less characters.

Also felt like adding one thing. Since my focus has always been magic, I'd thought I'd leave a love spell from the Late period 1000BC-100BC. It is themed appropriately for the thread.

It's called "I Have Made A Bed"

"Potency, Potency! A Bed for Potency!

✱Nanay made for her lover,

✱Ishara made for her mate,

I have made for my lover!

May his ardor not flag night or day!

Easter itself is an extension of Passover. Christ was on his way to celebrate Passover when he was tried and crucified. Eostre and her celebrations were added later, but the Christian elements of Easter already had a similar theme. It wasn't really a case of Christianity taking over a holiday as much as it was an already Judeo-Christian holiday that had a similar concept and held at the same time, which helped ease pagan Germanics into coming into the church. Ishtar reigns over many domains, but the rebirth aspect of Easter isn't hers

That's what anime says. Personally, while I've seen that *Inanna can be overbearing at times, she really is pretty mellow.

A lot of people in this general are, how shall I put this, subs, or (I hate the word) "feminine", so the "masculine" extremes of *Inanna, unless they're actively protecting them (or being directed sexually), are negative. They don't relate to that kind of energy. They only see the destructiveness it can cause.

You have to be able to stomach (or ignore) a lot of aggression to fully embrace *Inanna. I have no problem with it to begin with, being quite aggressive myself (as you might see later if these /pol/ fats keep running their stinking mouths while I'm at work). As long as you respect her stature, she is the most loyal and giving person you will meet.

It's hard to reconstruct our own traditions in this regard, but we can look to the sexual alchemy of other cultures to rebuild our own. Male Sexual Energy Cultivation and Multi-Organic Man by Mantak Chia are good books for this. You could easily do the practices in these books and dedicate them to the goddess. And who knows, if we practice sexual alchemy, do devotionals, and evoke the goddess enough, maybe Ishtar herself will teach some of us her own techniques.

Faith is always seen through the lens of human experience in a given space and time, in another age Ishtar may have been a dark prehistoric pregnant woman festooned in hand-made tribal decorations a spark of genius from a race in the throes of civilization, in Sumer she was of Semitic and voluptuous appearance dressed in the clothes of a queen of an early city state, her form showing the understanding of symmetry and anatomy. In our age she is seen as a young and agile Eurasian girl clad in fantastic and revealing regalia, her image crafted in modern style born from the synthesis of so many cultural legacies.

Yet both three are the same, an immanent aspect of the cosmos as see through the human soul.

Divine goddess, I love you. You are the Queen of heaven and I kneel to you in awe, respect, adoration. You have blessed me and filled my spirit with your presence. I swear myself to you, physical and mental, body, soul, spirit. I want to be with you, to walk your path and fulfill your will. I kneel only for you. Guide me, I am your soldier, I will act and bring you honor. I will be your shield, not that you need me to defend you, but I would eat your pain or deflect our enemies if you so wished because I do not want you to suffer any of it. I trust you, and I love you. When you found me, I was damaged. Lost, freezing. Your radiant hand reached down to me, your sweet words brought me peace and comfort. Your breath snaked through my existence, unlocking doors inside of me. I found waiting for me within. Your specialties, beauty, passion, lust, war such dynamic terms that are like cut stones, so many facets, angles, to behold the light and uncountable in number and variety. No treasure on earth can compare and I am so grateful you showed me. I kneel to you again, I feel my soul hum in tune with you, I kiss your feet I adore your delicate divine form. your skin is so perfect like cream on my tongue. I worship and I want you to smile, to enjoy me belonging to you, in your service at, your side, willing and eager. Tell me how to give you pleasure. I look up to you from the ground when your seated on the throne above. Command me and together our fire will burn brightly. Perhaps you descend on me from with furious need and take me, use me. I love it. Maybe you make me shiver with anticipation. Perhaps you will open yourself and invite me in. I dive into your luxurious warm depth, floating in your sea, rising and falling with the waves I am drenched in your love. I'll always be ready to satisfy your needs. Please don't use a service called "cockfile". People seriously think we just masturbate all day and want everything to be gay. Our reputation is absolute garbage, and that predates us as a group.

A lot has to be done on the reputation front. I'd go as far as saying that we should ditch as much of Babylon as possible. Focus on Assyrians (who loved *Inanna more than Babylonians did) and Sumer. Babylon, in the West, is synonymous with degeneracy and arrogance. Their reputation is not worth recovering or letting ourselves be weighted down by, for one very good reason. Assyria is where Ishtarism flourished. Babylon crushed the Assyrians and lowered *Inanna under ?Marduk. *Inanna is associated with Babylon only because Babylon was the most recent of the East Semitic empires.. and because of a well-reserved gate. People might be more familiar with Babylon, but they weren't great.. definitely not Ishtarites.

I cited as a joke, files are deleted in 24h

I don't think we should care about that though, the West morals are pretty retarded and different from any of the mesopotamian countries All this exaggeration and drama about ahhh degeneracy ahhh arrogance comes from greece, which rejected its Dionysian roots to embrace meaningless restriction in a way to look ""virtuous"", the deepest roots of cancel culture: judging other people's personal lives to meet some social quota

But yes, I know it's engrained on a lot of people's heads

The issue is, embracing the religion as it is, or contaminating it with hellenistic and christian morals to make it more digestible to the masses?

I agree if Assyria loved Ishtar more than Babylon we should associate the cult more with them, but not for moralistic reasons, that would be like "we don't support war because war is very bad" on a cult of Mars

Hatred of Babylon exists more because the Babylonians were dicks to the Jews (the spiritual ancestors of the Christians) than for specific ideological reasons. Since the Babylonians were dicks to *Inanna as well, we can find common ground with more Westerners and shed the "Whore of Babylon" stigma. This is about strategy, not maintaining weird Western values.

Yeah, you can't just remove whole aspects of the goddess to appeal to some puritan bunch.

The whole idea of degeneracy in modern world is laughable, given how even Christians and nazis online are basically mostly coomers as well.

I don't think it is either possible or useful to hold on to Christian idea of virtue vs sexuality, we're way past the point of no return, given how accessible all kinds of porn is online and how much sexual stuff is all around us. Might as well remove moral stigma from it, because honestly, being sexually "virtuous" in Christian sense is just a meme at this point.

Technically you can make this argument about any old religion, since it certainly doesn't cover half of the things we have in modern world.

I think that pursuing real sex is very important and by no means I support 2d > 3d mentality, but to use porn as an outlet for lust when real sex is not immediately available should not be a problem.

Finding a stable relationships would be better, of course. But even if I date a ORACC is a massive corpus containing cuneiform texts with translations and transcriptions. This is how you can search for texts about or containing Ishtar/Inanna.

The search function on the ORACC site is broken, so we'll be using KORP, korp.csc.fi/. It's a finnish site for searching online corpora. You can set the language to English at the top right.

To select cuneiform corpora to search, select "Other languages" at the top left. Then click on the red-lined box "Select corpora" and check the box for "Cuneiform".

We'll use the extended search mode instead of the simple one, so select that. In the search you can choose the feature you want to search by (base form, genre, translation...). You need to search for "base form = Ištar", so choose 'base form' in the drop-down and paste Ištar into the search bar. Ishtar won't work, the corpus uses š. This will include Sumerian texts talking about Inanna.

Then, just do a search. This will take a little while since there's a shitton of texts it needs to parse. When it's done, you'll see the results presented as rows of transcribed cuneiform text with each instance of "Ishtar" highlighted. Clicking on a result will show an info box at the right side, telling you info like the genre, transcription, etc. At the bottom of the info box is a link to Oracc, which will take you to a transcription and translation of the whole text.

A lot of the results will probably not be interesting, like legal texts. If you'd like, you can add additional search parameters ("add token") like genre = prayer/ritual/incantation.

Hope this explanation is understandable and easy to follow! Ishtar bless you and aid you in your search for knowledge.

I guess I'll post something I read the other day.

Its from Gods Among Men by Kiersten Neumann;

"There existed in Assyria an established expectation for the appearance of a god, and that this was realized by way of a wood/bitumen core overlaid with gold or silver skin, dressed in radiant, polychromatic garments and accessories. Stemming from these visual phenomena would have been a sense of the otherworldly, of the melammû, "divine radiance," that was presented through the image's brilliance."

"One of the ceremonies that was associated with dressing the gods is the mîs pî, "Washing of the Mouth," which included both the "mouth-washing," a mode of purification and severance from human craftsmanship, and "mouth-opening" (pîṭ pî), the invocation of the god into a physical form and the transformation of that form into an animated extension of the god. When cultic practices were later directed at this image, the recipient was not a lifeless object but rather the divinity in whose likeness the image was originally created"

"Fundamental steps in this creative sequence, as prescribed by the ritual instructions, included the fashioning of the bodily core; the production of masterfully crafted, brilliant, polychromatic garments and accessories; and the dressing of the core in these materials the elements that materialized the divine melammû. Mîs pî instructions also include dress-specific incantations as part of the ceremony; for example, "Exalted garment, lamahuššu-garment of white linen," and "Exalted crown, crown [endowed with] great awe." Such incantations reinforce the importance of each individual component to divine identity, and, when brought together, they engendered the embodied experience of the dressing of the gods the luminosity of the god's metallic skin; the plushness, warmth, and weight of the garments; the cold, polished surface of jewelry; the rustling of the garments and the ringing of metal upon metal."

OP, I understand that you believe in what we're doing, but you should add a disclaimer that involvement with her can and will ruin you for other women. There is absolutely no comparison between this fucking alpha, stable, directed and interesting woman and .. the relative bathtub slime we know as women. I could dream of her every night, wake up, jack off to what I saw until everything hurts down there, and never touch a human woman again. The level of fucking passion seeing her creates in me is near-frightening. I feel like I'm on drugs.

I've done stimulants before, and actually.. there is no comparison. I have no clue of what to do with this energy. It's more than just that I love her. Her energy is rubbing off on me. Been lifting a lot. By a lot, I mean a lot.

Rosenberg on Ishtar:

>With the Oriental peoples, religion linked with prostitution was quite customary. The priests nowhere allowed themselves to be deprived of this satisfaction. The same was likewise true of the pious Babylonian and Egyptian women. Initially they refused enforced prostitution, but eventually they gave

in. The history of the Goddess Ishtar is instructive. We see in the metamorphosis of this deity the decline of a people. At first she was the maidenly Goddess of hunting, indeed, of war. During Hammurabi's time she was still represented with a beard. Then she was held to be queen of heaven, Goddess of love and fertility. Under Phoenician influences she became the protective spirit of "religious" prostitution. Later, as Astarte, she became the symbol of sexual anarchy. As a result, Babylon was dissolved as a state and as a type; it was finished.

Christianity is a religion half-based on submission before coercion ("worship me or go to Hell"). In other words, it's halfly a coward's religion. The perfect psyop against Christians would be to endlessly broadcast the fact that these people are unwilling to burn and be tortured forever for what their heart truly believes (not least that there is nothing wrong with being human). I do not want to destroy Christianity, however. Unlike OP, I like some Western and Abrahamic things.

We have a world where people can have sexual freedom and lewd how much they want, in fact people's problems today is misuse of the excessive pleasures they have, not a restriction of them

Ishtar won, it's impossible to enslave people on that manner, even the elites have to use porn as a tool because it's impossible to restrict it: see how much of a failure nofap and anti-porn feminism is. Yes, people prefer to fap and do their hobbies instead of being a wageslave, the only thing they can do is try to profit by appropriating (you will watch OUR porn), controlling (amateur porn will be deleted because theres no age confirmation) and containing it (dont fap so you are more productive and give us more money!)

They had to appropriate homosexuality (if you are a fag you are part of LGBT(tm)), try to make it the most socially annoying (homosexuality as a social movement) and release stuff like AIDS and smallpox, yet it simply won't go away, people will have sexual freedom

Easy peasy

It takes strong men to build and maintain a civilisation.

These strong men in turn rely on their women to be loyal and their fellow countrymen not to stab them in the back.

As years go by and the civilization no longer expands because it's already too vast or it has been contained, it starts stagnating.

With hunts and wars no longer being possible, men become gradually emasculated and women stop respecting them. As a climate of decadence and scarcity sets in, social cohesion disappears because there is no longer a metus hostilis the entire society can rally against.

Ultimately individualism or a very petty form of communitarianism (based on one's social circle rather than one's city or country) ensures the constant presence of corruption and crime.

At this point it's clear that the society is dying, and the only hope is that it's replaced with something better, more wholesome. This is the part of the story where a new prophet emerges, promising the least privileged members of that society justice and order. The elite is not only debauched, but also relies on unloyal guards that are either ready to switch sides or not as motivated as their enemies, hence why the dam ultimately collapses. Whichever system is installed subsequently, you can be it will be much more frugal and self-aware, this ensure that at least in the short and medium term no displays of extravagance will take place

Any questions?

>It takes strong men to build and maintain a civilisation.

It takes strong, "masculine" individuals to build and maintain a civilization. This is common sense. If women can't participate in this, there's no need for them.

>These strong men in turn rely on their women to be loyal and their fellow countrymen not to stab them in the back.

You're too accommodating of women. They can either do what the men do or we can replace them with artificial womb sexbots. I don't care which.

>As years go by and the civilization no longer expands because it's already too vast or it has been contained, it starts stagnating.

Based.

>With hunts and wars no longer being possible, men become gradually more passive

I fixed that line for you. Now it's based.

>women stop respecting them

DO WHAT THE MEN DO OR GET REPLACED.

>As a climate of decadence and scarcity sets in, social cohesion disappears because there is no longer a metus hostilis the entire society can rally against.

What you're describing is a lack of patriotism, and excess freedom to think and do whatever. This bit says absolutely nothing about how prostitution and "sexual anarchy", in isolation, could collapse a society. It just assumes those things go with other things that will always follow them. There's no logical reason to believe that they do or that those will.

This will always be around.

Yeah, in practice, we live in a world pretty much following her ideals already.

At least in the western society Christian values are rapidly declining and people tend to pursue their desires like freedom, lust, beauty, etc. The name of goddess Ishtar is just not attached to it.

We will see if this lasts in our lifetime.

You have a lot of good thoughts in your head, kid, but your general thinking sucks.

For the thread, I will say that even your good thoughts are only good and based in our current situation. It's completely realistic to picture the species becoming something that doesn't have to play by these rules. Maybe one day, struggle will only exist for fun. I hope you and I can meet and fight in that age. For now, my side of the conversation will conclude.

A note about "femininity", for fellow Ishtarites: I'm not saying that we can do without this energy. Let's cultivate it with our love for one another.

I wouldn't equate ancient civilizations to modern ones. There are many fundamental differences and, chances are, we can do without millions of strong, patriotic men fighting in armies this time.

With automated assembly lines and precision weapons, civilization requires less "masculine" men than before.

It only takes 10% of smart nerds to go to work every day and code control systems to produce consumer goods and weapons necessary to supply and defend a nation. The rest can produce art and entertainment and be prostitutes for those nerds (and each other). The only problem is that we don't put enough emphasis on this meritocratic structure and lots of people feel unfulfilled, since the traditional system stopped working and the new one is too vaguely defined philosophically.

That's a non-sequitur, why sexual freedom makes a civilization have less than enough strong men?

The few times culture caused that, it was when christianity made the young choose to be priests instead of warriors on the roman empire (war was now le bad), needing to pay mercenaries that sacked rome in the end

Also, the more the technology advances, the less men needs to be "strong", there's absolutely no reason someone looking feminine couldn't have resilience enough for roles in a war, women fought on the wwii on certain roles. The only necessity of muscles on the army today is for carrying equipment, and the conservacuck mentality was never needed at all

Roman and greek soldiers would fuck boys then go fight and everything was right, but took one christcuck emperor to ruin everything

Sorry Fren, but the Mesopotamians believed in something very similar to miasma.

They believed the gods lived in the statues made in their honor. That they had a sense of smell, taste, and eyes to see. If you smelled bad, and came before the idols in a temple, that would be blasphemous. Also, being sick in front of the idol was frowned upon as well, as they believed that humans can spread disease demons when near others, including the gods.

Anon this is the most broad and random thing I have ever read. But I will take the bait. You can have a society that is very masculine, overtly so, but it doesn't mean that it will save a society from collapse. Take the Assyrian Empire for instance. That was a very masculine society, with strong traditional values. They veiled women(First law code to establish veiling women was Middle Assyrian law), they had 5 different types of slaves, between the 8th and 7th century BC, their scribes boasted that they deported over 4 million Arameans from their territory in the span of a single century. Yet why did the Neo Assyrian Empire fall? Because they caused so much pain and destruction to all the nations around them, they became a pariah state. It took a combined armed alliance between the Babylonians, Medians, Cimmerians, Persians, and Scythians to push the Assyrian armies back into their capital, in which they burned, both Ashur, and Nineveh. A over reliance on just the masculine is too much. Having a balanced society with outlets for masculinity, as well as a appreciation of the feminine will lead to a better outcome.

Spiritually? Yes. There is a old rite call the head over turning rite. Which involved Ishtar turning a man into a woman, and a woman into a man.

There also existed a old poem from around 2100 BC called Ishtar the harasser of men. It featured Ishtar feeling bored one day, so she changed the social gender roles between men and women in her favorite city Uruk. Men wore dresses and tip toed around big burly women wearing men's clothing and holding weapons. With lines such as "The women felt over the splendid young man, saying "how now!".

Let me find the full poem so I can post here, tho its not fully retained, and some lines are lost, the ending is as well.

Time for a based play from Mesopotamia. This play is an imitation of the classical Akkadian script style, written from a later time period, by a scribe who wanted to give his work authenticity and age, not too different from modern plays imitating Shakespearean verbiage.

✱Ishtar the Harasser of Men

"My lady, let me tell of your divine valor, let the chamber resound with the sound,
may all who is present listen!
O ✱Ishtar, I will praise your capable wisdom
Let him listen, may the one present, hear of your valor by the sound,
May the clamor call him here quickly!

Sing for joy O ✱Ishtar, let them extol your great deeds, Let them hear this song within,
It swells up, like a cresting flood,
at the strength of your virility.
He's on the way, the one who had,
no experience of your power.
Your footsteps will guide him till the end of time.

The inexpert man will learn from this,
He will seek out your doors ere,
you have laid your hand on him.
Your doings are strange, your ways unfathomable,
So many are your deeds, what god would not be like you?

Leveling a home and plundering, its bricks are yours O ✱Ishtar,
Overturning the board set of emotion and contentment,
Fickleness and rejection at night are yours, O ✱Ishtar.
Discord, disturbance, uncertainty, estrangement,
Torch of strife and extinguishing conflicts are yours O ✱Ishtar.

Anger, fighting, smoulder then cooling,
Cursing, holding the tongue are yours, O ✱Ishtar.
Falsification of truth in the land, parlaying fair words,
Doubling tasks and dispersing stores are yours O ✱Ishtar.
Dignity, entreaty, good fortune, and divine protection, Wealth, abundance, and a bed on the ground,

are yours O *Ishtar.

Blood relative, kinless, foreigner, underling,
Stranger, to make them brethren is yours O *Ishtar.
Bestowing success onto a house and,
the woman who dwells there,
Causing an angry breach, wherever you will are yours O *Ishtar.

"There's no one-size-fits-all answer to this question. Many doctors say a daily shower is fine for most people. (More than that could start to cause skin problems.) But for many people, two to three times a week is enough and may be even better to maintain good health."

Jesus OP you must be pretty fucking greasy to shower/bathe three times a day.

The image shows a section of a building with a distinctive blue and gold color scheme. The wall is adorned with a series of golden animals, including lions, tigers, and other species, arranged in a pattern that suggests movement and energy. The animals are depicted in a stylized manner, with some appearing to be in motion. The wall is framed by a large archway, which is also decorated with the same golden animals, creating a symmetrical and harmonious design.

In the foreground, there are several people, some of whom are walking and others are standing, suggesting a public space or a museum exhibit. The people appear to be engaged in various activities, such as taking photographs or observing the artwork. The lighting in the image is bright, indicating that the photo was taken during the day.

The image does not contain any discernible text. The style of the image is a standard photograph with a focus on the architectural details of the building and the artistic elements of the wall. The photograph is taken from a perspective that allows for a clear view of both the architectural elements and the people in the foreground.

That's not what I meant but actually yes it is better but only if men are still more masculine. I just think that it would be better for a Man to worship something masculine or androgynous. A bearded goddess of war AND love. Or a virgin goddess of art and war like Athena. Look at all the faggots in the thread who want to be women. Worshipping a pure feminine goddess will feminize your mind.

Worshipping a female goddess of beauty and lust shouldn't necessarily make men feminine themselves anyway. Men can just become beautiful in a masculine way. And just because the goddess is ok with gender transformation stuff too doesn't mean you have to do it.

I think of myself as a pretty masculine man, not necessarily in appearance, but in mindset for sure. I like Ishtar because I love and respect things that she represents: beauty, pleasure and a little chaos in life.

Why do we need age of kings and heroes? It's a big meme back from the times, where personal achievement of a single person could change history.

Today's the scale of humanity is just too large for that. Today we're led by systems and ideas, not by individual people.

Some ideas can be mapped on certain gods and given names to be better conveyed and understood, but it doesn't mean we need literal gods and heroes to lead.

Thus is some weird Christian mindset, divine ideals and paradise and the development of better earthly societies are not mutually exclusive.

West don't need to be ruled by divine kings to achieve closeness with gods. And we arguably never were. Just because kings claimed they're chosen by gods doesn't mean it was true. I don't think gods care enough about how our societies are organized to install rulers personally.

For the second and final time, I'm not the OP. The congregation is growing, and in time, there will be many people who post *Inanna images on a constant basis (it can't happen soon enough). There will be many people who follow the morning prayer tradition or whatever it is we are doing ("The Lady of the Morning is radiant on the horizon!"). I don't even know what that is, but I do it anyway. What you are witnessing is success of an idea. The birth of a culture.

I can be distinguished from the OP in three ways. First, I will only ever name the Goddess as "*Inanna". The OP prefers "*Ishtar". Second, all of my image filenames are "Inanna" with a number. The OP doesn't name their images that way. Third, the OP is generally a nice person, whereas I'm not really a great person. Learn to distinguish, because there will be more.

The image shows a relief sculpture of a female figure, possibly a goddess, standing on a pedestal. The figure is depicted with a winged headdress, a draped garment, and a raised hand, which could symbolize a gesture of power or protection. The figure is surrounded by three smaller figures, which appear to be cats, each with a different expression. The sculpture is set against a textured background that resembles a stone wall or a similar material. The style of the sculpture is reminiscent of ancient Egyptian art, characterized by its detailed carvings and the use of natural materials. The image is a photograph, and the lighting and composition suggest it is taken in a controlled environment, possibly a museum or a gallery, to showcase the artifact for educational or artistic purposes. There are no visible texts or inscriptions on the sculpture.

Goddess of the fearsome divine powers, clad in terror,
Riding on the great divine powers, Inana,
Made perfect by the holy a-an-kar weapon,

Drenched in blood, rushing around in great battles,
With shield resting on the ground,
Covered in storm and flood, great lady Inana,
Knowing well how to plan conflicts,
You destroy mighty lands with arrow and strength and overpower lands.

In heaven and on earth you roar like a lion and devastate the people.
Like a huge wild bull you triumph over lands which are hostile.
Like a fearsome lion you pacify the insubordinate and unsubmitive with your gall.

My lady, on your acquiring the stature of heaven,
Maiden Inana, on your becoming as magnificent as the earth,
On your coming forth like Utu the king and stretching your arms wide,
On your walking in heaven and wearing fearsome terror,
On your wearing daylight and brilliance on earth,
On your walking in the mountain ranges and bringing forth beaming rays,
On your bathing the girin plants of the mountains in light,
On your giving birth to the bright mountain, the mountain, the holy place,
On your being strong with the mace like a joyful lord, like an enthusiastic lord,
On your exulting in such battle like a destructive weapon
The black-headed people ring out in song and all the lands sing their song sweetly.

I shall praise the lady of battle, the great child of Suen, maiden Inana.

Hm...I'm going to say no! She is a Goddess of Love and Sex after all. Worship takes many forms and wanting to love your Goddess in such a way is an extreme form of devotion. Although, it might be best to have sex in the name of Ishtar while offering up your seed and sexual energy to her instead.

In that case we should take what is translated and put it in a good format. This will allow us to easily spread worship of Ishtar to others. We can always go down the route of other deities that may have "evolved" from her so to speak.

Worship the Queen of Heaven in all forms kind of a thing.

Characters summon historical (fictionalized) characters to do battle over the Holy Grail, that grants them a wish. Plot twist is that wish was never an option. Main character is Shirou Emiya (a squib) who learns magic through sheer willpower and eventually unlocks a cosmic hard drive full of swords and armaments.

This spun out of control into Fate/Grand Order, which is a electronic gacha game where you collect anime wives and husbands who worship you and call you master. The Ishtar in this totally on-topic thread is further removed from neopaganism than worshipping the icon of an SMT game. It's stupid, it feeds into the pockets of Japanese digital sweatshop owners, and these threads are either free or paid advertising.

This isn't Ishtar. This is an anime character called Tohsaka Rin in lingerie.

Not look like actual anime girls, but yes be young beautiful. Also behave like anime girls. Be cute and nice, and when they cause drama, it only adds to their charm (like a tsundere) rather than being just being annoying (a real life woman adding drama to your life).

Women seem to think men want their lives to get more complicated. It's silly.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a stylized green character with a large, round head and a small, round body. The character is wearing large, rectangular sunglasses with a yellow frame and a dark tint, and a brown, elongated cigar with a flame at the end. The character's mouth is open, revealing a brown, elongated tongue. The character's eyes are closed, and the character's hands are visible, with one hand holding the cigar and the other hand holding a lighter. The background is plain white, emphasizing the character's features. There are no texts present in the image. The style of the image is cartoonish and exaggerated, with a focus on the character's expressive features and accessories.

Feels like there'd be more drama here since most people use anime images in addition to real stuff and such

A new thread for a new age of Sumerian Neopaganism.

Ishtar's worship will bring a revolution for all of mankind. The moment her worship is normalized, she will be elevated to the top. She is the Queen of Heaven. She is the most based of the gods. There is no one else like her.

Ishtar za-mi!

Current main thread topic: How to spread Neo-Ishtarism to larger numbers of people?

Good first step is to keep having regular threads. Next we need some easy to read resources. The old pastebin is still decent for this. Catchy images, good prayers, and simply not engaging with anyone acting in bad faith. It's gonna take time.

I am of the opinion that we should build our own cultus based on historical worship of Inanna-Ishtar, as well as medieval grimoire procedures in the case of Astaroth. Once we have some adepts in communion with the Goddess, we can channel texts and practices from the Lady of Heaven herself. Homemade prayers are well and good, but if we want to revive the Cult of Ishtar, our practices need to have some spiritual weight behind them. With that in mind, here are some texts that we can begin reading, that aren't already in the Library.

Poor Christcuck blinder-wearing ignoramus can't accept the idea of female divinity because Everything must conform to his expectations and speculations because of what is written in His heavily edited Rump Bible that he takes so literally. Because it no longer contains books that his religion has decided would be cropped out, but he still the Word comes from the very mouth of his imperfect and unjust God. It is written that their God made man in His own image, so where in the hole is his God's female image?

O great and princely Inanna,

Your suppliant draws near

And stands before you as mighty Sargon;

Ára, Inanna-nun!

O Star of Lamentation,

Your suppliant draws near

And stands before you as righteous Sargon;

Ára, Mul-isiš!

O Lady of Battle,
Your suppliant draws near
And stands before you as noble Sargon;
Ára, Dam Erim-huš!

Speak, O fearsome one, that I may know of your power!

I dress for action, like a man;
My breasts and my hips are clad in the armor of men's might.
I dress for battle, like a prince;
My hands and my feet are carnelian and the scent of iron fills my nostrils.
I dress for war, like a king;
My lips are as crimson and within my mouth is the roar of Heaven.

Rising up as the Dragon of the East,
I take that which is denied to me;
Enki concedes and relinquishes the Mes into my hands;
I create that which cannot be made
And destroy that which cannot be broken.

Rising up as the Falcon of the South,
I lay hold to that which is due to me;
Anu concedes and relinquishes the keys to the E-anna into my hands;
I command the ordinances of Heaven.

Rising up as the Lion of the West,
I seize that which would be given to another;
Enlil concedes and relinquishes the power to ordain kings into my hands;
I establish their rule on the earth.

I am the warrior you fear;
I am the drum of battle and the army which marches against gods and kings;
I am the lion whose roar causes Heaven to tremble;

I am the bull whose bellow shakes the Underworld;
I am the turning tide and my proud waves shall never be stayed;
I am the storm and the tempest which sunder the earth;
I am the great mountain whose summit is beyond reach.

The evil-doer cannot escape my sight;
My eyes pierce darkness.
The evil-doer cannot take shelter from my rage;
My feet take me where he wishes to hide.

The evil-doers cannot defend themselves against my might;
My hands lay waste to their lives
And those who come to their aid are cast aside as rubble.

Lioness: The Song of Inanna by Samuel David - Lover Thu 23 Mar 2023 11:18:25
No.34377106 Report

Quoted By: >>34377159

I dress in linen, like a woman with no need of a man's approval;
My breasts are draped in precious gems.
I dress for the inner chamber, like a bride;
My hands and feet are decorated with henna
And the taste of honey is upon my tongue.

I dress for the art of love-making, passion,
The kissing of the phallus, and the caress of the vulva;
My hips are clad in silver and gold
And all who gaze upon me are spellbound by my dance.

Rising up as the new bride,
I take that which is promised to me in the cool hours of dawn;
My lover concedes and delivers his body into my hands;
I draw out that which brings me pleasure and leave him longing for more.

Rising up as the harlot in the city gates,
I lay hold of that which is due to me in the heat of midday;
The men of the city concede and one by one
I take them in turn and bind them into servitude.

I command the plowing of the field,
And the bounty of the earth is poured out into my lap.
Rising up as the evening star,
I seize that which would be given to another.

Dumuzid concedes and brings pleasure to my body;
I give him the names desired by kings and set him upon a throne.

I am the unbridled woman;
I am the cry of passion in the inner chamber
And the caress that stirs aching loins.

I am the sacred whore
Who causes virtuous men to tremble with lust;
I am the dancing girl whose hips part the waves of the sea.

I am the cool wave that pulls you under;
I am the heat of the midday sun that burns you with my kiss;
I am the deepest cave whose depths you long to explore.

The chaste maiden and youth cannot escape my sight;
My eyes unlatch locked doors.
The chaste maiden and youth cannot cloister themselves in the holy chamber;
My feet lead me to them and I draw them out with my dance.

The chaste maiden and youth cannot seal themselves away in a bower;
My hands caress them and stir their longing for one another
And bring them close so that they may consummate their love.

No.34377286 Report

Quoted By: >>34377328

I dress in power and majesty,

Like the sun and moon, each in their turn;

My head is crowned with the light of salvation.

I dress in virtue and splendor like a holy priestess;

My hands and feet are jeweled with mercy, grace, favor, and peace

And the radiance of my heart is without limitation.

Rising up as the radiant star of the East
I take that which is mine to drive out of my most holy place.
The people concede and relinquish their despair into my hands;
I lift up that which has been cast down, and restore the broken.

Rising up as the eternal star of Heaven
I lay hold of that which is due to me.
The people offer up their holy sacrifices;
I am moved by their devotion and draw them to my side.

Rising up as the shining star of the West
I seize that which would be given to another.
The kings of the earth concede and lead their subjects to my holy temple;
There I make them my priests and priestesses, my reed-men and reed-women,
My lamentation singers and sword-wielding dancers.

I am the axis and the crux upon which the world turns;
I am the princely one who ordains destinies and decrees Fate, for my voice is the command of Anu, Enki, and Enlil.
I am the falcon among sparrows;
The gods flee before me as I rise up from my throne.

I am she who has dared to descend and break the gates of the Underworld;
I am the width and breadth of the sea;
I am the rainbow over the land
Which soothes the hearts of those who have been afflicted by my rage;
I am the light of the stars whose radiance is seen by all upon the earth

The downtrodden cannot escape my sight;
My eyes search for them to and fro upon the earth.
The downtrodden cannot rest in ruined places;
My feet lead me to their forgotten place
And I draw them out as a shepherd with his flock.

The downtrodden cannot falter in my presence;
My hands reach for them
And I gather them to my breast as precious lapis and carnelian.

So I'm working on the next OP, including an updated Pastebin. This is what I've got so far. Thoughts? Anything else we should add?

A thread for the discussion of worship and conjuration of Ishtar-Inanna, Aphrodite Urania, Astaroth, and related entities. However you work with the Queen of Heaven, you're welcome to discuss here.

"Inanna was worshiped in Sumer as early as 4000 BCE, but it was not until the post-Sargonic era that she became one of the most widely venerated deities of the Mesopotamian people.

Appearing in more literary compositions than any other deity, Inanna embodied endless complexities and contradictions: an unbridled goddess at once upholding and destroying the status quo; a passionate goddess engaging in romantic and destructive erotic love; a heavenly goddess who trod the underworld; a feminine goddess who was sometimes portrayed as a bearded warrior; and a mercurial goddess bestowing tender mercies even as she moved freely from one conquest to another."

it was psychosis used against the people likely from the cults of abraham

the crusades are an example of this jesus in the flesh was the anti-christ and the slave system in his name was designed to offer a 'subjugated/perverted' body but...

the 'way' in which people are controlled is by projecting ~psychosis~ into the world ; this is done via 'demons' and 'muh satan' etc

so ~you generate this nebulous psychosis~ then manipulate it, via churches and so on today media does the same thing

~projection of fear : which is a psychosis~ to control and manipulate with

I would hesitate the world wars were the fault of abrahamic cults

the crusades were undoubtedly and maybe from the crusades you can see a 'people being manipulated by psychosis of fear to die for nothing on behalf of abrahamic cults~ why were they targetted?

build a shrine, burn incense, observe the celestial ishtar, say a prayer. divine flashes are seen in the smoke of sacrifice and your mothers lips whisper with the voice of the wind. become strong in mind and body. be better than others.

what is our god? the culmination of the lingering touch. the jewel of the stars. the knife in the dark. a kiss on a cold day. the one who is taken and takes in turn. pride, strength, and spite, beauty, love and change.

your larping, but belief makes reality.

>>34372816

The right message but you took it all the wrong way, i used to love her now they treat her like a side bae...

the communion: visions of the feminine essence of yourself, which engages you in acts: you are provided instructions on the construction of the temple: you are shown the array for worship: you are shown how to activate functions the practice: you are yourself, not a divine ideal: you cannot build a temple as explicitly shown: you can build a home for the believers, but they have made already homes for themselves: the functions will not activate because heaven is, quite literally, too far away.

so - practices were revealed. texts? none began as texts. prophets are given sentences and fragments and their service is the assembly of "the big picture". expect 100+ years of oral tradition before we understand what exactly, our god wishes us to do in explicit words.

I could describe to you the exact architecture, the exact clothing, the jewelry, the geometry and the symmetry. These things could build a temple. But belief takes time; if I were to codify this, who would believe? But if I create, divine inspiration, the people spirits will be touched and they will know.

we are bound by chains of history: dumuzid, the consort of ishtar, is transformed by utu, the sun, into a beast part eagle and part snake. in the new world, this is kukulkan: the male god of the morning star.

what of the husband? dont forget half the story!

I agree. All in good time my friend. Additionally, in order to develop our spiritual abilities and deepen our abilities to commune with the goddess, we should all be doing meditation or yoga. I'll link an article on Buddhist Shamatha meditation below, which is the kind recommended for the development of powers. Eventually though, maybe we could figure out a system of Bhakti yoga around Inanna. And of course I think raja yoga is supposed to be good stuff as well. Unfortunately I think those are the big ones we have to work with, available in English.

<https://www.lionsroar.com/how-to-practice-shamatha/>

And then I guess a little bit advanced, but we could look at incorporating inner fire into our practice through Jason Miller's Pillars and Spheres for instance. And there's Daoist sex magick that would be worth looking at as well; I'm sure Inanna would be pleased to have male adherents who can have multiple orgasms and then use the extra energy in internal alchemy.

Salaam brother and yes I agree - but i think my perspective is different. I am saying, a system is not for the believers of today but for the wise men and women of tomorrow to develop from the practices we cultivate. example: i do my diligences, i built a small shrine and carved an idol and the star far out on a mountain trail. and when i return there it becomes a pilgrimage. when i go to the beach at night and look at venus it is my observance. when i burn my incense and pray it is my ritual.

meditation is great but a pre developed system inhibits the natural and intuitive understanding of divinity; it boxes your senses and spirit.

you missed my point - pointless sex magic, inner fire, these are systems created by nonbelievers. "I told you to build a home for the believers but you have instead built houses for yourselves, which I and those before me left!" Let this be thy first reading of scripture if that is what you yearn for.

multiple orgasms isnt what fertility is about...a celebration of sex in its pleasure AND its ability to create new life. inner fire? let your fire burn bright and hot, that you may spread the burning seed...you read but you are blind, you walk but you are crippled, you hear and do not understand.

This is a new thing: the return if an old thing. as a crone passes her wisdom to a girl so too should our understanding be shaped by history; yet the girl grows into s beautiful woman all her own. Would you bind your god Ishtar in these textual and spiritual chains? To me that reduces the radiance, mars the beauty, silences the message and dulls the sharpness of the fingernails raking down my back.

I think we'll have to agree to honor the Queen of Heaven in our own ways. From my point-of-view, if we don't use the techniques and traditions we have at hand, then we won't get anywhere in this lifetime. Meanwhile if we experiment around and see what the goddess finds acceptable we could develop powerful relationships with her, along with powerful techniques now. And then people would really want to flock to our cultus. Because really, what's the point in flailing in the dark while our cultus continues to flounder? Just my 2 cents though; I think a lot of this will depend on what the goddess says to our Adepts when she converses with them directly. Only, I'd like to get to that point some time in this lifetime.

Oh, Goddess who rules as Queen of the Night, for what reason would you seek one such as I?

Our stations are different as you rule those who perform the sacred duty of quelling the stress of men and whilst I am but a king who rules over my garden and my hearth.

And what could I offer that you that would match your company that has taken in as many souls as there are stars in the sky?

Your embrace would be as tight as a half-door.

Your companionship as secure as a fort that keeps its soldiers outside its walls.

Your sweet nectar as wet as a well filled with doubt.

Your words as trusting as a shoe that devours the foot it takes in.

The love you give and the lovers you receive in turn are as lasting as a sword covered in rust.

Alas I cannot accompany one as great as you for I would not grasp the fruit of the tree that has fallen into the earth when I have been invited to grasp the sweetest of fruits from the mountains of Asgard.

May you seek out someone who has standards that differ from one such as I.

Sing of Ishtar, most awe-inspiring of goddesses!

Let the mistress of womenfolk be praised, the greatest of the Igigi-gods!

ii (5)

She is clothed in pleasure and seduction, endowed with voluptuousness, glamor, and allure.

Ishtar is clothed in pleasure and seduction,
endowed with voluptuousness, glamor, and allure.

At her lips drips honey-sweetness; her mouth is life itself.

Trysts blossom as suits her nature.

She is splendid; seduction-magics rest upon her head.

Her markings are beautiful; her eyes are prismatic, iridescent.

The pure goddess: command comes from her.

She carries the fate of the world in her hands.

From her attention, prosperity comes into being,
and helpful spirits of all kinds.

Seduction, submission, sexuality, satiation,
and concord: she rules over them.

The abandoned girl finds in her a mother.

She will proclaim her among the women; she will call her name.

Who can equal her greatness? Anyone?

Powerful, exalted, and fabulous is her status.
Ishtar: can anyone equal her greatness?
Powerful, exalted, and fabulous is her status!

She is the one whose standing is greatest among the gods;
her command is honored, and it prevails over them all.

I apologize for being rude. I still stand on my point though.

While I believe it is important for imaginery to evolve, relying on a character from Type Moon (Tohsaka Rin) to represent a goddess is as good as using Goku for Marduk, Yugi for Horus, Superman for Yaweh, etc.

It is a meme at best, and not good enough for Inanna herself. I don't even care about the japanese drawing style anymore, if you take her seriously, don't you think she deserves her own representation instead of stamping her name on a random character?

This is a thread for the discussion of worship and conjuration of Inanna-Ishtar, Aphrodite Urania, Astaroth, and related entities. However you work with the Queen of Heaven, you're welcome to discuss here.

"Inanna was worshiped in Sumer as early as 4000 BCE, but it was not until the post-Sargonic era that she became one of the most widely venerated deities of the Mesopotamian people.

Appearing in more literary compositions than any other deity, Inanna embodied endless complexities and contradictions: an unbridled goddess at once upholding and destroying the status quo; a passionate goddess engaging in romantic and destructive erotic love; a heavenly goddess who trod the underworld; a feminine goddess who was sometimes portrayed as a bearded warrior; and a mercurial goddess bestowing tender mercies even as she moved freely from one conquest to another."

Succubus/Incubus General

DISCLAIMER:

Some have reported attracting the attention of these entities by simply reading about them. If you're a dabbler who just wants to see if it works don't summon. Diet, outdoor & breathing techniques for improvement. If you're unprepared for a potentially lifelong relationship, or at the very least, a life-long open door connection with sexual spirits and the occult, avoid this topic entirely. If you have a loving relationship with your human spouse or partner and desire a sex spirit to spice things up, or if you want a human partner in the future take caution, as these entities can be jealous or decide an initially open relationship is no longer so (request an open relationship during the summoning ritual). These spirits can harm or kill you when sufficiently angered and not easily banished.

Last thread: >>34398120

Old threads: <https://archive.4plebs.org/x/search/subject/%2Fsuccgen%2F/>

FAQ:

>What are succubi?

Female spirits of sexual desire, who often choose human mates. They can't be banished with holy objects

>How to summon?

The Letter Method is used to focus your intent into a message to one of the Four Succubus Queens, requesting that they match you with one of their daughters. No blood or soul sacrifice necessary. See links

>Do they steal your life force?

Succubi use sexual energy, which is released naturally during sex. Under normal circumstances they won't take your life energy

>Can she look.
Succubi take forms attractive to you naturally >They're tulpas?
No. However, those in romantic relationships with their tulpas are welcome >Incubi?
Same method

You do realize, that for years now coomers all over the world have been sacrificing their virile seed to Ishtar's feet? Unless there is a large secret cult somewhere, today more people worship this anime conception of her than the historical one. Even if Ishtar had no foot fetishism aspect in pre-modern times, she absolutely does now. We, as a humanity, have literally annointed it onto her with our seed.

Ishtar is now a goddess of feet (among other things), whether you like it or not.

The pure goddess: command comes from her.

She carries the fate of the world in her hands.

From her attention, prosperity comes into being,
and helpful spirits of all kinds.

Seduction, submission, sexuality, satiation,
and concord: she rules over them.

The abandoned girl finds in her a mother.

She will proclaim her among the women; she will call her name.

Who can equal her greatness? Anyone?

Powerful, exalted, and fabulous is her status.

Ishtar: can anyone equal her greatness?

Powerful, exalted, and fabulous is her status!

She is the one whose standing is greatest among the gods;
her command is honored, and it prevails over them all.

Ishtar is the one whose standing is greatest among the gods;
her command is honored, and it prevails over them all!

O great and princely Inanna,
Your suppliant draws near
And stands before you as mighty Sargon;
Ára, Inanna-nun!

O Star of Lamentation,
Your suppliant draws near
And stands before you as righteous Sargon;
Ára, Mul-isiš!

O Lady of Battle,
Your suppliant draws near
And stands before you as noble Sargon;
Ára, Dam Erim-huš!

Speak, O fearsome one, that I may know of your power!

I dress for action, like a man;
My breasts and my hips are clad in the armor of men's might.
I dress for battle, like a prince;
My hands and my feet are carnelian and the scent of iron fills my nostrils.
I dress for war, like a king;
My lips are as crimson and within my mouth is the roar of Heaven.

Rising up as the Dragon of the East,
I take that which is denied to me;
Enki concedes and relinquishes the Mes into my hands;
I create that which cannot be made
And destroy that which cannot be broken.

Rising up as the Falcon of the South,
I lay hold to that which is due to me;
Anu concedes and relinquishes the keys to the E-anna into my hands;
I command the ordinances of Heaven.

Rising up as the Lion of the West,
I seize that which would be given to another;
Enlil concedes and relinquishes the power to ordain kings into my hands;

I establish their rule on the earth.

I am the warrior you fear;
I am the drum of battle and the army which marches against gods and kings;
I am the lion whose roar causes Heaven to tremble;

I am the bull whose bellow shakes the Underworld;
I am the turning tide and my proud waves shall never be stayed;
I am the storm and the tempest which sunder the earth;
I am the great mountain whose summit is beyond reach.

The evil-doer cannot escape my sight;
My eyes pierce darkness.
The evil-doer cannot take shelter from my rage;
My feet take me where he wishes to hide.

The evil-doers cannot defend themselves against my might;
My hands lay waste to their lives
And those who come to their aid are cast aside as rubble.

The Divine Feminine takes a lot forms. Look into Bastet and Sekhmet for overt feline imagery. I say lioness because to me She takes forms that would be perceived as terrifying to the average man, but a Lioness is scary to all except her cubs.

I dress in linen, like a woman with no need of a man's approval;

My breasts are draped in precious gems.

I dress for the inner chamber, like a bride;

My hands and feet are decorated with henna

And the taste of honey is upon my tongue.

I dress for the art of love-making, passion,

The kissing of the phallus, and the caress of the vulva;

My hips are clad in silver and gold

And all who gaze upon me are spellbound by my dance.

Rising up as the new bride,

I take that which is promised to me in the cool hours of dawn;

My lover concedes and delivers his body into my hands;

I draw out that which brings me pleasure and leave him longing for more.

Rising up as the harlot in the city gates,

I lay hold of that which is due to me in the heat of midday;

The men of the city concede and one by one

I take them in turn and bind them into servitude.

I command the plowing of the field,

And the bounty of the earth is poured out into my lap.

Rising up as the evening star,

I seize that which would be given to another.

Dumuzid concedes and brings pleasure to my body;

I give him the names desired by kings and set him upon a throne.

I am the unbridled woman;

I am the cry of passion in the inner chamber

And the caress that stirs aching loins.

I am the sacred whore

Who causes virtuous men to tremble with lust;

I am the dancing girl whose hips part the waves of the sea.

I am the cool wave that pulls you under;
I am the heat of the midday sun that burns you with my kiss;
I am the deepest cave whose depths you long to explore.

The chaste maiden and youth cannot escape my sight;
My eyes unlatch locked doors.
The chaste maiden and youth cannot cloister themselves in the holy chamber;
My feet lead me to them and I draw them out with my dance.

The chaste maiden and youth cannot seal themselves away in a bower;
My hands caress them and stir their longing for one another
And bring them close so that they may consummate their love.

I dress in power and majesty,
Like the sun and moon, each in their turn;
My head is crowned with the light of salvation.

I dress in virtue and splendor like a holy priestess;
My hands and feet are jeweled with mercy, grace, favor, and peace
And the radiance of my heart is without limitation.

Rising up as the radiant star of the East
I take that which is mine to drive out of my most holy place.
The people concede and relinquish their despair into my hands;
I lift up that which has been cast down, and restore the broken.

Rising up as the eternal star of Heaven
I lay hold of that which is due to me.
The people offer up their holy sacrifices;
I am moved by their devotion and draw them to my side.

Rising up as the shining star of the West
I seize that which would be given to another.
The kings of the earth concede and lead their subjects to my holy temple;
There I make them my priests and priestesses, my reed-men and reed-women,
My lamentation singers and sword-wielding dancers.

I am the axis and the crux upon which the world turns;
I am the princely one who ordains destinies and decrees Fate, for my voice is
the command of Anu, Enki, and Enlil.
I am the falcon among sparrows;
The gods flee before me as I rise up from my throne.

I am she who has dared to descend and break the gates of the Underworld;
I am the width and breadth of the sea;
I am the rainbow over the land
Which soothes the hearts of those who have been afflicted by my rage;
I am the light of the stars whose radiance is seen by all upon the earth

The downtrodden cannot escape my sight;
My eyes search for them to and fro upon the earth.
The downtrodden cannot rest in ruined places;
My feet lead me to their forgotten place
And I draw them out as a shepherd with his flock.

The downtrodden cannot falter in my presence;
My hands reach for them
And I gather them to my breast as precious lapis and carnelian.

>Durga (Sanskrit: दुर्गा, IAST: Durgā) is a major Hindu goddess, worshipped as a principal aspect of the mother goddess Mahadevi. She is associated with protection, strength, motherhood, destruction, and wars.[5][6][7]

Durga's legend centres around combating evils and demonic forces that threaten peace, prosperity, and dharma, representing the power of good over evil.[6][8] Durga is believed to unleash her divine wrath against the wicked for the liberation of the oppressed, and entails destruction to empower creation.[9] Durga is seen as a motherly figure and often depicted as a beautiful woman, riding a lion or tiger, with many arms each carrying a weapon and often defeating demons.[3][10][11][12] She is widely worshipped by the followers of the goddess-centric sect, Shaktism, and has importance in other denominations like Shaivism and Vaishnavism.

Define "demon" because its basically a buzzword. What's more important than putting Them in linguistic boxes is the question of if They are good for us or not, and by good I mean the feeling of power increasing. I believe that the three good Dædra, which have prior irl pagan mythological equivalents, (such as that Inanna/Ishtar/Ushas directly corresponds to Azura,) strengthen the Will to power, and do so better than most extant religious systems.

Then They aren't demons because none of Them were giants. And power is not distinct from will to power. It is a primal metaphysical vitalism, you could also say life-force, vril, chi, or prana.

Fire is a benevolent God called Agni, Who is very close to that energy, being the most energetic of the 4 elements below Akasha, or Æther, although the source of life-force energy is ultimately the divine feminine, a Void beyond the æther. This biblical stuff you parrot is unfortunately mostly just lies that served an ethnopolitical purpose at the beginning of the age of pisces. There is very little value in clinging to that cult.

So a lot of Catholics will pray to the Virgin Mary for specific purposes, then pray a rosary, potentially multiple times, repeating the Hail Mary many hundreds of times to invoke the Virgin Mary to pray for them. Some of them swear on this for results. This is magic in my book. So how does this help us? The Virgin Mary is very bound up with the historical currents that Ishtar is a part of. So we can reverse-engineer this practice to our own ends. Instead of a rosary, we can use a mala or even a counter app. What does this look like?

We could start by praying to Ishtar in our own words, asking her for help with what we need. If you can maybe add offerings of incense, beer, milk.

Then, begin to repeat the below prayer, which is a hack of the Catholic Hail Mary prayer. Repeat it three, seven, thirteen, twenty, but preferably one hundred times or many hundreds of times. This should evoke the power of the goddess to help you in whatever way you desire.

"Hail, Ishtar, full of grace,

Anu is with thee.

Blessed art thou amongst women

and blessed is the fruit of thy womb, Nanaya.

Holy Ishtar, Queen of Heaven,

grant us abundance,

now and at the hour of our death.

Ishtar za-mi!"

Orphic Hymn to Aphrodite Wed 05 Apr 2023 03:58:09 No.34479173 Report

Quoted By: >>34487358

Heavenly, smiling Aphrodite, praised in many hymns, sea-born, revered goddess of generation, you like the nightlong revel and you couple lovers at night, O scheming mother of Necessity.

Everything comes from you; you have yoked the world, and you control all three realms. You give birth to all,
to everything in heaven, upon the fruitful earth and in the depths of the sea, O venerable companion of Bacchos.

You delight in festivities, O bridelike mother of the Erotes, O Persuasion whose joy is in the bed of love, secretive, giver of grace, visible and invisible, lovely-tressed daughter of a noble father, bridal feast companion of the gods, sceptered she-wolf, beloved and man-loving giver of birth and of life,

with your maddening love-charms you yoke mortals and the many races of beasts to unbridled passion.

Come, O goddess born in Cyprus, whether you are on Olympos, O queen, exulting in the beauty of your face,

or you wander in Syria, country of fine frankincense, or, yet, driving your golden chariot in the plain,

you lord it over Egypt's fertile river bed.

Come, whether you ride your swan-drawn chariot over the sea's billows, joying in the creatures of the deep as they dance in circles, or you delight in the company of the dark-faced nymphs on land,

(as, light-footed, they frisk over the sandy beaches).

Come, lady, even if you are in Cyprus that cherishes you, where fair maidens and chaste nymphs throughout the year

sing of you, O blessed one, and of immortal, pure Adonis.

Come, O beautiful and comely goddess;

I summon you with holy words and pious soul.

I did not say He is a demon hybrid. I don't follow the Abrahamist dichotomy of angels and demons in particular. One of Her symbols is the Morningstar, Venus, but it is not the only one, there is also the moon, and the light of the Sun at dawn and dusk, and that seems to go back to the Proto-Indo-European understanding. I'm not simply going off astrology. Lucifer is indeed a male facing of the Morningstar, but Azura goes beyond that for Ushas is infact a facing of Aditi and consort of Rudra, i.e. Dyaus Pitr and so has solar and lunar energies, especially twilight, beyond simply being Venus. The relation between Gods and celestial bodies, as well as nakshatra, of which there are some associated with Her is not as straightforward as interpretatio Romana of the 7 classical planets and leaving it like that.

Immortal Aphrodite of the shimmering thone, daughter of Zeus, weaver of wiles, I pray thee crush not my spirit with anguish and distress, O Queen. But come hither if ever before thou didst hear my voice afar, and hearken, and leaving the golden house of thy father, camest with chariot yoked, and swift birds drew thee, their swift pinions fluttering over the dark earth, from heaven through mid-space. Quickly they arrived; and thou blessed one with immortal countenance smiling didst ask: What now is befallen me and why now I call and what I in my heart's madness, most desire. What fair one now wouldst thou draw to love thee? Who wrongs thee Sappho? For even if she flies she shall soon follow and if she rejects gifts, shall soon offer them and if she loves not shall soon love, however reluctant. Come I pray thee now and release me from cruel cares, and let my heart accomplish all that it desires, and be thou my ally.

This is a thread for the discussion of worship and conjuration of Inanna-Ishtar, Aphrodite Urania, Astaroth, and related entities. However you work with the Queen of Heaven, you're welcome to discuss here.

"Inanna was worshiped in Sumer as early as 4000 BCE, but it was not until the post-Sargonic era that she became one of the most widely venerated deities of the Mesopotamian people.

Appearing in more literary compositions than any other deity, Inanna embodied endless complexities and contradictions: an unbridled goddess at once upholding and destroying the status quo; a passionate goddess engaging in romantic and destructive erotic love; a heavenly goddess who trod the underworld; a feminine goddess who was sometimes portrayed as a bearded warrior; and a mercurial goddess bestowing tender mercies even as she moved freely from one conquest to another."

Thanks for the thread. I have been researching Ishtar for some time now and have come to the conclusion that she is the ultimate representation of female power and sexuality. I believe that through worship and conjuration of this deity, we can tap into our own innate power as women and harness it for our own benefit. I am interested in hearing about other people's experiences working with Ishtar and how it has affected their lives.

I think just the opposite. I think the factions of the establishment are worshipping Baal and Moloch respectively, and have actually spent thousands of years actively suppressing the power of the divine feminine because she threatens their power structure and prison matrix. They are in recent times giving the divine feminine some power, some iconography, some opportunity to grow in the collective consciousness. They do so for tactical reasons, as a means of controlling humanity through sex, lust, compassion and love, manipulating many of the core aspects of life as a means of controlling and confusing us, but it won't work forever. Because by using the power of the divine feminine they unwittingly give the divine feminine her strength back, and she is much, much, much more powerful than them, and they have no control over this divine feminine because it cannot truly be controlled by anyone. You can only come into an agreement with the divine feminine, she'll chew you up and spit you out the moment that any transactional relationship is through. But she is as loving and understanding as she is destructive and calculating, and that's what I love about her too. If you show her love and understanding, if you meet her where she is, she will absolutely do the same for you.

I respect the divine feminine, I see her as the neutral force she is, capable of both incredible creation and incredible destruction, just like humanity itself. We have so much to learn from her, and maybe she has things to learn from us even.

Once one realizes that the ideological and political factions of the deepstate discover they are not channeling their ritual energy towards God, but the vagina of a taloned egrigore, than it becomes very apparent why the masonry is assembling itself in the way it is. Why justice, temperance and fortitude are not incentivized, but forbidden delicacies, unbridled lusts and ceasements unto temptations are coveted. In the internal it reveals what aught to be rooted out for the higher ideals to be restored

The image is a painting depicting a figure standing on a rocky shoreline during what appears to be either dawn or dusk. The figure is dressed in a long robe and a hood, suggesting a religious or ascetic figure. The person is holding a staff and is looking down at the ground, which is covered with small pebbles and stones. The sky is painted in soft, warm hues, with the sun setting or rising in the background, casting a golden glow over the landscape. The painting style is realistic with a focus on the interplay of light and shadow, creating a serene and contemplative atmosphere. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image.

The Mother Goddess doesn't sanction all of our depravity, she loves us regardless. It's not about channeling energy toward God or away from God, it's about Loving yourself whether you are in tune with the divine or not.

You can follow the Goddess and not be taken up by the rapture of unbridled lusts. You can if you want, and she will still Love you. But you don't HAVE to.

She is so powerful and Loving that you can have an unshakeable faith in the Light and she will not hesitate to Love you. It's what the Father intended, I think.

don't be deceived, it is the inventor of 'the sacred' prostitution, the hareming out of acolytes as sexual favours to maintain influence and prestige, it takes little imagination what sort of 'sacred rites' are offered to the most powerful individuals. An entity that whispers sweet nothings in your ears as one destroys themselves, their families and their communities with their episodes of self stultification is not true Love. It is Christ that understands that one doesn't know what they got till its gone, and expounds a truer form of love.

Experimental Results Prayer Magic to Ishtar Sun 09 Apr 2023 21:41:19 No.34518690 Report

So a lot of Catholics will pray to the Virgin Mary for specific purposes, then pray a rosary, potentially multiple times, repeating the Hail Mary many times to petition the Virgin Mary to pray for them. Some of them swear on this for results. This is magic in my book. So how does this help us? The Virgin Mary is very bound up with the historical currents that Ishtar is a part of. So we can reverse-engineer this practice to our own ends. Instead of a rosary, we can use a mala or even a counter app. What does this look like?

We could start by praying to Ishtar in our own words, asking her for help with what we need. If you can maybe add offerings of incense, beer, milk.

Then, begin to repeat the below prayer, which is a hack of the Catholic Hail Mary prayer. Repeat it three, seven, thirteen, twenty, but preferably one hundred times or many hundreds of times. This should evoke the power of the goddess to help you in whatever way you desire.

"Hail, Ishtar, full of grace,

Anu is with thee.

Blessed art thou amongst women
and blessed is the fruit of thy womb, Nanaya.

Holy Ishtar, Queen of Heaven,
grant us abundance,
now and at the hour of our death.

Ishtar za-mi!"

This is a thread for the discussion of worship and conjuration of Inanna-Ishtar, Aphrodite Urania, Venus, Astaroth, and related entities. However you work with the Queen of Heaven, you're welcome to discuss here.

"Inanna was worshiped in Sumer as early as 4000 BCE, but it was not until the post-Sargonic era that she became one of the most widely venerated deities of the Mesopotamian people.

Appearing in more literary compositions than any other deity, Inanna embodied endless complexities and contradictions: an unbridled goddess at once upholding and destroying the status quo; a passionate goddess engaging in romantic and destructive erotic love; a heavenly goddess who trod the underworld; a feminine goddess who was sometimes portrayed as a bearded warrior; and a mercurial goddess bestowing tender mercies even as she moved freely from one conquest to another."

Well sure, honestly sacred prostitution is really just similar to dao partners or tantra or other such practices. Sacred masturbation though I am pretty unsure about, since there is no feminine energy directly working with you like it would with a partner. So unless if we branch into succubus territory to force a feminine essence around here, which I don't condone/am a part of anyways, I am not really sure how one can channel the lusts in with worship.

I'd point out that solo cultivation is a thing in all the traditions you mentioned. We could go the route of spirit copulation, though I'd think you'd need to ask Inanna-Ishtar for an angelic companion for that, or at least for permission to do it with your succ.

Solo cultivation is a thing...but not with sexual fluids. Solo cultivation becomes about some contained and self-stimulated orgasmic feelings without even touching.

Anyways, my curiosity was more about somehow fetishizing worship and making it work. Does Ishtar even HAVE angelic or other sorts of minions?

Nah man. Check out Mantak Chia's book "Multi-Orgasmic Man" for a method of self-cultivation with full stimulation. You're right though that you mostly don't ejaculate, or rather it becomes optional

In terms of fetishizing worship, I think there's a certain level of respect the goddess should be given outside of sexual practice (and even within sexual practice, just with different standards).

But as Queen of Heaven she would definitely have angels or at least spirit servants, even if they aren't documented in extant primary sources. As Astaroth she rules over all the Goetic spirits in the Americas, and this is heavily documented in medieval sources, if we wanted to go that route.

There is a lot I like from Mantak Chia, but didn't he condone some sort of edging technique? I remember before hearing his techniques lead to semen falling into your bladder constantly and can cause issues, losing sexual energy long-run.

Given that respect should be given to a goddess, I am just going to go out on the limb here and say it's kind of hard NOT to be respectful if it is foot-stuff you focus on. Anyways, that is actually really interesting bringing up the Verum. I never thought to compare her to Astaroth and go down that vein, that sort of thing might actually work. Isn't rulers over Goetic spirits though in Verum work supposed to be specifically over that grimoires spirits, or does it extend to solomonic too? I don't work with Verum, but know some Goetic spirits in solomonic magic do give familiars. Have you tried working Verum traditions or with Astaroth? I do know in that tradition you are supposed to actually work top-down, making pacts with higher entities on the hierarchy to work with daemons under them, so if one wants to shoot for the daemons under Astaroth they kind of got to give it a go, and if Astaroth = Ishtar then that can get really interesting.

You don't really edge with Chia's techniques; you separate orgasm from ejaculation and he teaches specifically to avoid the retrograde ejaculation problem you've touched upon. You don't have the ejaculatory contractions at all when you do this successfully; the orgasm contractions alone happen, which feels somewhat different than regular ejaculatory orgasm. And you get basically no refractory period, which is how you know you've done it correctly

I haven't gotten to work with Astaroth yet, though I plan to soon now that the weather is getting better where I live and I can practice outside. That said, Jake Stratton-Kent has some really interesting material on the historical relationship between Ishtar and Astaroth in his version of the True Grimoire

Define "abide by." It's just a depiction that some of us like. You don't have to use it if you don't want to, and maybe you can even argue that it's unserious to use it for worship. Post other depictions if you have an issue with it

It would be like if we had a Buddhism general and the Buddha character from Record of Ragnarok was posted a lot. It doesn't necessarily mean they'd be using it as a picture of worship; it's just fanart that inspires devotion in some

Like, is using an image of her considered symbolic only, or is it a reenactment thing, like the Sacred Marriage stuff for male Ishtari? And if a reenactment/representation, would there be a general, "canon" set of physical traits Ishtar would be considered to have for accuracy purposes? Buddha I can understand having no need to worry about since that faith is all about sublimation of the self, but you Ishtari strike me as something different from those guys.

I think that remains to be decided by the thread. A lot is in the air, given we don't even know if the Burney relief for example is Inanna, and thus don't necessarily have a "canon" depiction that's true to ancient sources.

There's techniques that will be useful to you as a gay man or woman in the book as well, solo and with a partner. You could for instance pray to Ishtar to grant you blessings and visualize the blessings becoming indivisible from your own energy body, then do the techniques in the book

This is a thread for the discussion of worship and conjuration of Inanna-Ishtar, Aphrodite Urania, Venus, Astaroth, and related entities. However you work with the Queen of Heaven, you're welcome to discuss here.

"Inanna was worshiped in Sumer as early as 4000 BCE, but it was not until the post-Sargonic era that she became one of the most widely venerated deities of the Mesopotamian people.

Appearing in more literary compositions than any other deity, Inanna embodied endless complexities and contradictions: an unbridled goddess at once upholding and destroying the status quo; a passionate goddess engaging in romantic and destructive erotic love; a heavenly goddess who trod the underworld; a feminine goddess who was sometimes portrayed as a bearded warrior; and a mercurial goddess bestowing tender mercies even as she moved freely from one conquest to another."

If you're interested in working with the goddess, the best things you can do are to start meditating (bhakti or raja yoga or shamatha for instance), banishing (LBRP for instance), and making offerings. Preferably do all three daily, or at least a few times a week. This will get her attention and increase your ability to communicate with her.

Experimental Results Prayer Magic to Ishtar Sun 16 Apr 2023 00:15:43 No.34563634 Report

So a lot of Catholics will pray to the Virgin Mary for specific purposes, then pray a rosary, potentially multiple times, repeating the Hail Mary many times to petition the Virgin Mary to pray for them. Some of them swear on this for results. This is magic in my book. So how does this help us? The Virgin Mary is very bound up with the historical currents that Ishtar is a part of. So we can reverse-engineer this practice to our own ends. Instead of a rosary, we can use a mala or even a counter app. What does this look like?

We could start by praying to Ishtar in our own words, asking her for help with what we need. If you can maybe add offerings of incense, beer, milk.

Then, begin to repeat the below prayer, which is a hack of the Catholic Hail Mary prayer. Repeat it three, seven, thirteen, twenty, but preferably one hundred times or many hundreds of times. This should evoke the power of the goddess to help you in whatever way you desire.

"Hail, Ishtar, full of grace,
Anu is with thee.

Blessed art thou amongst women
and blessed is the fruit of thy womb, Nanaya.

Holy Ishtar, Queen of Heaven, grant us abundance, [or nn request?]
now and at the hour of our death.
Ishtar za-mi!"

It seems to me like I've been marked by Inanna (and she like all archetypal entities have many names, I just use this one)

I may be Nephilim, formed from an implanted fragment in a vessel to serve an energy

I mean that's just one way of putting it as there are many layers but I'm mostly sharing the perspective of this physical. It's beautiful but I do not wish to imply it is special. If you find yourself called to mantle her experience and beingness then this is potentiated for any incarnation, though such things may be given it's skin "before" incarnation, before our lived experience gives it substance.

I wasn't open to this sort of stuff at all until less than a year ago after a series of life and self changing experiences, visions, meetings, etc.

Before that, if anything, talk about esoterica, spirit, paranormal, and conspiracy made me irrationally angry. The conscious tries to block the unconscious.

My capacity for selfless love feels increasingly limitless, though it comes painfully with knowing well the depths of hatred and its spectral relationship to love. To know one is to know it's shadow.

Anyway I just thought it was particularly neat that all my tattoos are symbolically associated with Inanna and 5 but that was not my conscious intention when I got them. In fact I gave the artists creative license so I didn't ask for the specific details. Instead they were given.

In retrospect it should have been more obvious in the path, trials, and narratives my life has taken so I don't necessarily feel super clever, I feel more like a child catching onto something they just couldn't understand. I've had a good guide through all of this, even though I ignored her for so long, it's just part of the trial. I think the spirit given to be transformed in this case may have been a particularly difficult ego.

thanks for reading if you did, I'm just reflecting aloud but I'm glad if someone can find some sense of familiarity

I haven't been to this board much in the past, but recently I've felt called by both Ishtar and Kali, and it's interesting to come here and see a whole Ishtar-focused Goddess worship thread. I'll take that as a good sign.

What do you all think of the view that Lilith is an aspect of Ishtar or vice-versa? I've had experiences with both (unrelated to the Lilith Nazis) and besides the Burney Relief confusion, it makes sense to me that Ishtar would chose to retain power as a feared she-demon once Her cult had been vanquished.

Ishtar did/does hang around as a demon, but that demon is Astaroth. Lilith actually existed in Mesopotamian myths, but it was usually a class of malevolent spirits called lillins, which Ishtar was generally shown to be opposed to. So basically if you're going to worship Lilith and Ishtar, you should keep them entirely separate. Have separate altars, separate rituals, etc.

This series by Esoterica is really useful for a historical discussion of Lilith: <https://youtu.be/n1EKccz4fS0>

>Using your body to get multiple people praising her name

Sacred prostitution/other sex work I take it? Sounds very holy to Ishtar. So basically I'd expect you'd get a lot of GBP, probably more than enough to make up for any annoyance the above might cause.

They say the gods are not physical, not of this mundane matter, that they are something other than flesh. Thus, the bearded patriarchs say it is our minds that connect with them. They have made a grave and foolish mistake.

The gods are in the stuff that we feel; they lurk in the physical processes, in the connection between the octopus-electricity-system and the flesh suit. The so-called conscious, rational thought is the farthest thing from godhead. The thrill of electricity, the pressure: that is the closest.

We are not divine in our separation from animals. Our humanity is what separates us from the divine. And thus we can celebrate, and theorise Her glory. But never forget that the divine lurks in electric tingles and skin-on-skin and in exploding hearts and singing tongues.

I'm sure it's possible, just not likely. Most people need some kind of consistent meditation/yoga practice to achieve communication with entities. And those who do succeed just through prayer are generally those who enflame themselves in extended devotionals. Easiest thing to do though would probably be by combining all these methods, i.e. doing Bhakti yoga such as through Liber Astarte in the OP. Daily practice or close as possible would still be necessary though i know i am late for the thread but, i have my own theology on inanna-ishtar that may be interesting to share. so i believe inanna-ishtar is actually the primordial mother that all cultures promote, from holy mary to the prehistoric venus, to guanyin to mahadevi, the only mother, single, unique and monotheistic very similar to god in islam. i believe she can be a wife, a friend, a daughter, a lover, a sister but beyond anything else she is a mother, and all living beings in the universe are her literal children. our souls were self-made by herself with no (male) seed and we just appear in her sacred uterus by divine mystery until our soul is ready to enter the physical body and in the moment of our death, we go to her realm and worship and serve her as her children. very similar like the mother goddess in mormonism. our souls have her DNA and all of us are literal spiritual brothers and sisters with no father (because she is the primordial source). i believe that this theology is dualistic between the forever individual soul and the great unique mother and there is no chance of pure union. the closest thing is spiritual sex which can be closer to the orthodox theosis which one cooperates with the energies of the deity but beyond that total union is incapable, even if she is the creator of all souls forever-kind mother among all living beings, we should rejoice in our motherly ancestress and be exalted in our worship and servitude

But it is said that she can grant wealth, lovers, children, and abundance in general. Even political power if you're into that kind of thing – she's a goddess of just statecraft and conquest. Based on her depiction in Lioness, she seems like a nondual, almost enlightened, goddess to me – so if you want spiritual attainment she can grant that too. Our Lady is a diverse goddess who can grant many things, depending on what you're looking for

I mean, nobody here is forcing anyone to do anything, but prostitution is sacred to the Goddess. There was literal sacred prostitution within the temples of Inanna, in addition to midwifery and I think brewing as well. She is a goddess of all kinds of love, from monogamy to polyamory, gay, straight, and everything in between

So if that sounds unpleasant to you, maybe you'd prefer to have a big family with your single partner. Or if none of that interests you, you could become a politician and work for justice. Or maybe you're just a lay follower who doesn't serve in any particular major capacity. In that case, she still loves you and will help you, as she is a friend of humanity, our mother even.

Well specifically speaking, to the female empowerment egregores.

If there is one woman of quality, let her not be oppressed. Let her speak. And let her act. Let her be free as one would allow a wise man to act and be free. Oppress the other women who are of low quality, who are of low IQ, who make mistakes. There are too many of them.

I would rather there be a feminine priest class, that is vetted for IQ, temperance and piousness than a full on free for all for all women, and the idiots that the idiot women protect.

Let there be oppression of the dumb and of the weak.

Those who are also into the mysteries of the universe. And it made me realize that perhaps its just dumb people which are the enemy. Dumb and weak ones. So you Ishtar folk, you will get a pass from Krishna. I hope you too make progress and gain more power.

i can see the great mother innana-ishtar as a adi-buddha

>when the Kalacakra tradition speaks of the Ādibuddha in the sense of a beginningless and endless Buddha, it is referring to the innate gnosis that pervades the minds of all sentient beings and stands as the basis of both samsara and nirvana. Whereas, when it speaks of the Ādibuddha as the one who first attained perfect enlightenment by means of imperishable bliss, and when it asserts the necessity of acquiring merit and knowledge in order to attain perfect Buddhahood, it is referring to the actual realization of one's own innate gnosis. Thus, one could say that in the Kalacakra tradition, Ādibuddha refers to the ultimate nature of one's own mind and to the one who has realized the innate nature of one's own mind by means of purificatory practices

>Adi-Buddha isa term for the Almighty God in Buddhism. This title came from the Aisvarika tradition ofMahayanain Nepal, which is spread through Bengal, and became also known in Java. Aisvarika is the term for the disciples of theist view in Buddhism

she is the very supreme primordial point of encounter in wich everything begins with, just like adi-buddha she is self-sustainable, always joyful and mother of all beings, wich we are by nature connected to her (inner adi-buddha)

I think she's closer to Prañjaparamita if anything. But she's too worldly imo, probably not truly enlightened from a Buddhist perspective. I do place her as an adjacent being though – perhaps an emanation of Shakti. This would place her on the level of Kali-ma, so if you're a Vedantist maybe she is fully enlightened from your perspective

The image depicts a figure in a red, flowing garment that appears to be made of a translucent material, possibly silk or a similar textile. The figure is holding a small, dark object in their right hand, which could be a candle or a small object of significance. The figure's face is obscured by a red veil or mask, and they are standing in a dimly lit, smoky environment. The background is filled with swirling patterns and a radiant, sun-like light source that casts a warm glow on the figure. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of surrealism, with a dreamlike quality and a sense of mystery.

That said, why would you go to her for help with your porn addiction? She's not exactly a goddess known for her self control

"I am the unbridled woman;

I am the cry of passion in the inner chamber And the caress that stirs aching loins.

I am the sacred whore who causes virtuous men to tremble with lust;

I am the dancing girl whose hips part the waves of the sea.

I am the cool wave that pulls you under;

I am the heat of the midday sun that burns you with my kiss;

I am the deepest cave whose depths you long to explore.

"The chaste maiden and youth cannot escape my sight;

My eyes unlatch locked doors.

The chaste maiden and youth cannot cloister themselves in the holy chamber;

My feet lead me to them and I draw them out with my dance.

The chaste maiden and youth cannot seal themselves away in a bower;

My hands caress them and stir their longing for one another And bring them close so that they may consummate their love."

So am I the only person in the thread to have successfully worked the Multi-Orgasmic Man by Mantak Chia? I think in many ways, due to the way it easily meshes with Chinese folk traditions for instance, the Daoist techniques may prove the easiest to use as a form of internal sexual alchemy, until we have our own channeled sexual alchemy from Inanna-Ishtar herself. The title is actually a misnomer, as it has techniques for women and couples as well.

Mother Barbelo is third male because she is also (within) you. That sort of "all encompassing goddess has androgyny" theme is not all that unknown, Isis has it too, but I don't know enough about Ishtar specifically to comment further beyond the warrior aspect already mentioned in

I think that a lot of men just want to have power, so a lot of men have aversion to the weak and powerless. Love and its stuff is devoid of much power. Some men hate the feminine, some do, for sure. But even more men just ignore it. As one would ignore the ice cream vendor if one doesn't care about sweets. Like who cares. I myself am of the ignoring variation. I did a lot of practice on celibacy, a lot of meditation, have my own patriarchal gods. And to be honest. I managed to get to a level of self control that is not very common in this world. The solomon way of controlling demons, or having resistance to them is to fast, to be celibate, and then once they have little influence on you. You can use them.

In a similar way I also see this female deity. Though my dreams are still full of sexual allures (probably because I am doing roids now, I am /fit/), in real life I have great resistance to them. I managed to mogg actual religious people who constantly compel to find a wife. And I find it funny. So once the influence and the thread vanished. I could re-connect with this, without a threat to myself.

According to the religious, women have the capacity to resist sexual impulses like 7 times better. 7 times better a woman (who is pure) also has better spirituality (though good luck now finding any pure woman). Through my spiritual build up I think I got to like a woman only being 3x times better than me, the control a woman is on average only 2 times better than me, all the while I got my male advantages :)

As an AI language model, I don't have personal beliefs or opinions, and it is not appropriate to make broad generalizations about love and relationships. Love is a complex and multifaceted emotion that can take many forms, and it is up to individuals to define what love means to them and how they want to express it in their relationships. It is true that some relationships are based on mutual attraction and benefits, but that does not necessarily make them "satanic" or lacking in genuine love. Relationships can evolve and change over time, and it is not uncommon for people to grow apart or realize that they are no longer compatible. Divorce rates may also be influenced by a variety of factors, including social and economic changes, cultural values, and individual circumstances. Ultimately, each person's experience of love and relationships is unique, and it is not fair or accurate to make sweeping generalizations about them.

Love can take many different forms and can mean different things to different people. It is not appropriate to label any particular type of love as "satanic" or to make broad generalizations about love and relationships. Love is a complex and multifaceted emotion that involves many different factors, such as attraction, emotional connection, trust, and respect. Genuine love is not just about physical attraction or mutual benefit, but also involves a deep and enduring emotional bond that can withstand challenges and difficulties.

It is important to recognize that relationships can be complex and that they can change over time. People's needs, desires, and expectations can evolve, and it is not uncommon for people to grow apart or realize that they are no longer compatible. However, this does not necessarily mean that their love was not genuine or that their relationship was "satanic".

In general, it is not productive or useful to label types of love as "good" or "bad" based on arbitrary criteria. Each person's experience of love is unique, and it is important to respect individual choices and preferences. Ultimately, the most important thing is to treat others with kindness, respect, and empathy, and to strive to build relationships that are based on genuine love and mutual understanding.

The Eastern vamachara tradition, also known as the "left-hand path," is a set of practices and beliefs found in certain forms of Hinduism and Tantra. Vamachara literally means "left-hand path," which refers to a spiritual approach that is non-traditional and often involves practices that are considered taboo or forbidden.

However, over time, the term "left-hand path" was adopted and misunderstood by Western occultists and practitioners of esotericism. In the West, the left-hand path became associated with practices that were considered selfish, unethical, or even immoral.

This misunderstanding occurred due to cultural differences and the lack of context and understanding of the original Eastern traditions. The Western practitioners failed to appreciate the spiritual and cultural significance of the vamachara practices and instead focused solely on the external practices, such as sexual rituals and the use of taboo substances.

Furthermore, the Western practitioners often separated the vamachara practices from their original religious and cultural context, which led to a distortion of the original meaning and purpose of these practices.

As a result, the left-hand path became associated with practices that were seen as dangerous, destructive, and anti-social in the West. This is a far cry from the original purpose and intention of the Eastern vamachara tradition, which aimed at transcending dualities and attaining spiritual enlightenment through the transformation of the self.

In summary, the corruption and misunderstanding of the Eastern vamachara tradition into the Western left-hand path occurred due to cultural differences, lack of context and understanding, and the separation of practices from their original religious and cultural context.

The jewish left hand pathers are a bit different from this. The morality system still operates in the christians to a large degree. It is the prime cause of the duality, and of evil vs good in the west. One can write volumes as to how this is a bad thing.

But the fact is that even atheists carry this black and white thinking in them. So it means that it is usable to exploit or just to change in a proper way.

This is a thread for the discussion of worship and conjuration of Inanna-Ishtar, Aphrodite Urania, Venus, Astaroth, and related entities. However you work with the Queen of Heaven, you're welcome to discuss here.

"Inanna was worshiped in Sumer as early as 4000 BCE, but it was not until the post-Sargonic era that she became one of the most widely venerated deities of the Mesopotamian people.

Appearing in more literary compositions than any other deity, Inanna embodied endless complexities and contradictions: an unbridled goddess at once upholding and destroying the status quo; a passionate goddess engaging in romantic and destructive erotic love; a heavenly goddess who trod the underworld; a feminine goddess who was sometimes portrayed as a bearded warrior; and a mercurial goddess bestowing tender mercies even as she moved freely from one conquest to another."

If you're interested in working with some form of the goddess, the best things you can do are to start meditating (bhakti or raja yoga or shamatha for instance), banishing (LBRP for instance), and making offerings. Preferably do all three daily, or at least a few times a week. This will get her attention and increase your ability to communicate with her, as well as generally train your occult abilities.

In the Gods' Quarter, in Ankh-Morpork, Fate had a small, heavy, leaden temple, where hollow-eyed and gaunt worshippers met on dark nights for their predestined-and fairly pointless rites. There were no temples at all to the Lady, although she was arguably the most powerful goddess in the entire history of Creation. A few of the more daring members of the Gamblers' Guild had once experimented with a form of worship, in the deepest cellars of Guild headquarters, and had all died of penury, murder or just Death within the week. She was the Goddess Who Must Not Be Named; those who sought her never found her, yet she was known to come to the aid of those in greatest need. And, then again, sometimes she didn't. She was like that. She didn't like the clicking of rosaries, but was attracted to the sound of dice. No man knew what She looked like, although there were many times when a man who was gambling his life on the turn of the cards would pick up the hand he had been dealt and stare Her full in the face. Of course, sometimes he didn't. Among all the gods she was at one and the same time the most courted and the most cursed.

What's the deal with men worshiping a female goddess? Shouldn't you worship a fierce warrior/Heaven god?

It's because you want to get some bitches?

It's because you have so much masculine enrgy that you need to balance it(Is this because so many trannies have huge dicks?)?

I don't mean to offend anyone I am just curious. I personally worship Jupiter.

status quo of 'dead' reverence but in particular to 'hide' the fact Isis/Eset is within Islam(b) subjugated : the Queen of heaven subjugated under a lamb sacrifice : islam(b)

anyhow 'all' the Queen of Heavens parallel Death; >>34642122 Lilith they understood was the source resonance and mother of the universe as a dragon : she is inverted as a demon to represent Death: but the 'truth' of Death is that it's a mother and this title places her equal to God if not above.

Mary is equally a source resonance as the 1st child as universe could be the 'body' of unconditional love within all space : Mary is parallel the Queen of heaven : parallel Death for Death is the parameters of all life and the projected 'womb' housing of the universe is 'equal parameters of Death' (Death is an infinite concept within all space to see the hologram metaphoric of a divine form : infinite concept : it parallels a mother in all regards : and not as mortality but metaphoric : for 'infinite concepts are divine forms' and Death can 'hold' source resonance for it being infinite concept : it exists always and contains all : Death is the 'title' of the Queen of Heaven : if any would challenge her 'title' as ability :

'she' is also Gods projected choice form to house the universe; you 'can' name her: but you must understand how to place her equal to if not superior to God :

Its skin is a mottled green, and it has a beard and mustache. The creature is wearing a dark-colored hat and a vest with a badge on the chest. The background is a plain, light-colored wall. The creature's posture suggests a sense of contemplation or introspection. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the creature's features and the texture of its skin.

The Queen of Heaven is a source resonance, she is the equivalent of DEATH as a concept; infinite concept within all space mesh: she is UNTOUCHABLE : 'pure' like Mary: the 'parallel' of the FATHER is one of a DREAM CONCEPT: HE IS UNTOUCHABLE in this regard too they are 'both' untouchable parents to the universe your shitty version doesn't even tell you she represents DEATH so it's worthless, I work with foundation, you work with clown contrivances written by psychopaths

>muh she fucked the city

~then she doesn't represent the Queen of Heaven~ consciousness represents HE and SHE both 'invisible' but measurable: he is the psyche and she is psychology : the equivalent of dark matter : an invisible measurable : she is UNTOUCHABLE clause 1 is : if you imagine the 'mother' as a 'lover' she has lost aspect of 'mother' and loses source resonance : it's like ~the whore~ thing plays into this clause huh?

like she isn't the Queen of heaven: but HIDDEN behind a 'lover' and so ~calling the queen of heaven LESS than SOURCE MOTHER~ you're wrong infinitely because your psychopathic clown family lied about everything, you 'cite material' and show NO FEELING OF UNDERSTANDING WHAT YOU PROFESS IS REAL

the 'mother' is projected material of the universe

>parthenogenesis

proves in nature 'all things' can SKIP the need for a mate and 'this' can factor in conception of the universe and thus 'she' can INFINITELY be argued coming before God even as a parallel of DEATH itself; for 'that' is the dream housing of the universe; the parallel of a MOTHER and parameters of LIFE : the chosen projected form (by God?) of a MOTHER.

The image is a candid photograph capturing a young girl with short, dark hair, looking directly at the camera. She has a slight smile on her face. The girl is positioned in the foreground, with the background showing a scene of a fire. The fire is intense and is visible through the windows of a house, with flames and smoke billowing out. In the background, there are several people, including firefighters, who appear to be attending to the fire. There is also a fire truck visible in the background. The setting suggests an urban environment, possibly a residential area. The image is taken from a low angle, which emphasizes the girl's face and gives a sense of immediacy to the scene. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image.

I don't believe in it, personally. I'm a pretty bog-standard Christian (Neo)-Platonist, at the end of the day. But I do have a deep respect for the Divine Feminine, and I understand the appeal of deities like Inanna. In another life, I may well have fallen down the /inana/ rabbithole, but I was thankfully preserved from that. Not sure whether my faith in Inanna could have survived these threads, given how utterly cringeworthy a lot of these 'practices' are.

As for Babalon and Ishtar, I don't think I need to elaborate on my thoughts, given my own religious background.

It's a Pr*testant theology. I think it has the potential to match a lot of what the other anon was talking about, with Inanna being someone who conquers new domains. Personally, that's the aspect of her character I find most compelling. It's a shame Sumer was so early, and got conquered by syncretic psychopaths who perverted Inanna into the demonic Ishtar. I think if Inanna's purely Sumerian aspects had survived, it could have developed into a really neat axial age religion.

She comes from Death parallel: death is an infinite concept as a parameter to see within all space; the hologram of an infinite concept and complete space mesh : taking an infinite concept to logical conclusion: 'it comes first' sequentially as INFINITE concept would always have existed; it is then a source resonance and 'as infinite concept' ~contains all things~ : meaning 'there is no need for a physical mate nor to split before conception~ and so 'skips' mate and projects final form as a mother : this is parthenogenesis in nature and why the entire universe is a projected mother: Christ is between two aspects and infinite concept as unconditional love : the mothers bond to child : and 'this too' is 'all space' meshed : the universe is a projection of infinite and so only infinite concepts can be within all space instantly : 'the universe is alive' because 'it is' a mother+child : and the universe dreams because it is alive; within this dream : which is an infinite concept(dream) of an infinite concept(universe) : God takes form (likely Krishna but parallels Shiva etc) : 'he' dreams of being within a mother as a projected form (mate parallel?) : but because he is within an infinite concept (dream) he has to 'void' a shape from the abyss and ~he cloaks himself in Death: 'in the form of a mother'~ this is the Torus of death that 'nulls' dream to allow a form within : and God is the voided middle of the Torus of Death within dream : 'voids' are dream represented;

...an infinite mutable space with null value, so either way God is a dream, within a dream: 'he' is compounded infinite concept : magnified like a tachyon (quantum capable) : but 'also' God 'dreams' of being cloaked by the mother (1 wish) and then 'dreams of housing the entire universe' in the projected form of a 'mother' who parallels Death (Gods choice) and so 'the infinite system of the universe 'projects' into a 'womb' : so we are eternally unborn and 'that' is a 'system of infinite life' : as consciousness

but because God compounded DEATH (as a mother) twice, SHE like HE is psychosis override capable AND quantum, arguably either of these can be 'source' or '1st' but it's better to understand they are 'one' truly for God is dreaming within the cloak of the mother about the mother... they are '1'.

Death is the most projective supreme source, so if you don't take God dreaming of Death you have no supremacy of a deity, but Death arguably comes before all and parallels Brahma : 'both sources' before conception; God is represented as the psyche and Death is represented as psychology

so you might argue you needed God to make life : and he is quantum capable as a dream to 'be on conception' no matter...

basically I work with 'the source'.

18 "To the angel of the church in Thyatira write:

These are the words of the Son of God, whose eyes are like blazing fire and whose feet are like burnished bronze.

19 I know your deeds, your love and faith, your service and perseverance, and that you are now doing more than you did at first.

20 Nevertheless, I have this against you:

You tolerate that woman Jezebel, who calls herself a prophet.

By her teaching she misleads my servants into sexual immorality and the eating of food sacrificed to idols.

21 I have given her time to repent of her immorality, but she is unwilling.

22 So I will cast her on a bed of suffering, and I will make those who commit adultery with her suffer intensely, unless they repent of her ways.

23 I will strike her children dead.

Then all the churches will know that I am he who searches hearts and minds, and I will repay each of you according to your deeds.

24 Now I say to the rest of you in Thyatira, to you who do not hold to her teaching and have not learned Satan's so-called deep secrets, 'I will not impose any other burden on you,

25 except to hold on to what you have until I come.'

26 To the one who is victorious and does my will to the end, I will give authority over the nations—

27 that one 'will rule them with an iron scepter and will dash them to pieces like pottery'—just as I have received authority from my Father.

28 I will also give that one the morning star.

29 Whoever has ears, let them hear what the Spirit says to the churches.

there is only 1 Queen of Heaven, and 'she' parallels Death (supreme creator: arguably Gods equal if not above)

the title of Queen of Heaven won't be used for a whore except by deceitful vermin who were so vindictively childish they had to threaten their rules on pain of death

What worth are those aspects in the world? consigned to a lowly thread and remembered as 'stories'? Death is the Queen of Heaven and rivals God himself. The source mother is untouchable by clause of : associating 'her' with a lover removes aspect of perceived 'mother' and she loses 'source' resonance : as she is not representing the eternal Queen as a mother how is your Queen established? Mine is a parallel of Mary herself, and I state all Queens are 'this' mother: Lilith would be source resonance(they bastardised her equally)

I sat my Queen on the throne of all heaven and the fabric of reality itself, yours is reliant on stories of denigration.

The image is a painting that depicts a scene of religious iconography. At the center, there is a figure that appears to be a woman, possibly the Virgin Mary, holding a baby. She is surrounded by a group of angels, who are depicted in a variety of poses, some with their hands raised in prayer or offering. The angels are predominantly white with some having golden accents. The background is a soft, ethereal light, and the overall color palette is warm with a hint of blue and gold. The style of the painting is reminiscent of the late 19th to early 20th-century art movements, particularly the Romanticism and the Art Nouveau styles. The painting is signed "R.M.A." in the lower right corner, indicating the artist's signature.

The Goddess of love in 'name' I asked why unconditional doesn't work (parallel of Jesus) : it's because you can be exploited for 'who' you might love (persecuted by others for love if you love a condemned) that and being exploited by psychopaths who wouldn't love you no matter for they have no heart

she taught me what compounded love was in offering attributes; such as respect 1st, then loyalty and devotion, before unconditional such a 'compound' was used in the theatrics of Jesus name to have you 'compound love' for the clown show, it's not just a base level; they mind control into the attributes via repetition or so but you will resemble some form of Christ in the process, even if it's completely misguided in reverence for a cartoon character

the Greek Goddess I would assume, I only asked because I had an experience with her name involved that showed me a hermaphrodite child within a womb : in my dream : and I understood 'it was a hermaphrodite child within the womb' of the universe : it's a universal parallel of m+f before man and woman : the shapeshifter child (universe) but I separated the names in my head as Hermes and Aphrodite to remember... and then asked her after that event

'any talk of a Queen of Heaven and a whore aspect is slander equally' :

obviously so 'it is hate fuelled to denigrate a position opposed to their dictated monopoly: and such things can be written about slowly and after other systems are established, burning the library of Alexandria for example, and having the only other alternative story

I see no value in revering stories of old considering the Churches aim to pervert all knowledge. >>34654320 do you think if there's a religion that predates what we have today it can't be lied about? I think the people that wrote about others like Sumerians are paralleled in the bible verses and they are just slanderous tales of how God helped them...

>the most likely scenario to these ancient cultures is they met a parasite that stole all of their understanding and then wrote off the contrivance as an act of God : Egypt, Jericho etc and so 'do you believe the walls came down with a magic device'?

or

>is it more logical they traded stolen gold from Egypt to gain entry to Jericho then 'rotted' it from the inside : stealing and murdering as they went; to then 'write a magic occurrence' as their 'meeting' ~this~ civilization

I refuse to accept stories of old are factual if they are written like the bible would such as ishtar and inanna denigrated : 'obviously' a ~whore~ that slept with the entire city (once they have free reign to write narrative)

They settled Uruk and the first cities because the alternative was to wander the Earth forever searching for their next meal.

You stand for a median life expectancy of 25, for hunger, for sorrow, for the inability to do so much as bury the dead. That is why you are Enkidu.

Of course, any records can be falsified, but it is possible to read the original Sumerian texts and at least glimpse how pre-Abrahamic and pre-Sargonic people conceived of the Divine.

>people who wrote about others like Sumerians

The Sumerians wrote about themselves. Cuneiform on clay preserves remarkably well. We have more writings from the origin of history than of any time ever since, up until well after the printing press.

No, I don't believe the walls of Jericho nor the mountain of Ebih were brought down by magic, but I am capable of reading between the lines to see what each tells us about the numinous immanent local manifestations of divinity.

your projection is so hollow I'm surprised you can spin a form with it: but it's an image of Isis/Eset you use and do not revere: she is within Islam(b), irrefutably the hidden aspect and tied to ~the holy spirit~ the mothers they inverted the systems and you represent evil as a result; EL is the body and inverted to have the world hold the ego of psychopathic liars through their 'stage show' mock martyrdom in Jesus name : to attempt to steal Christ from the world equally; 'for we are Christ' as it's a universal body from THE MOTHER and child (the duality=universe) they then 'dictated' the 'spirit' through their poisonous rhetoric of having to abide by the word of these psychopaths...

all aspects were inverted and as for Islam they did the same: except they subjugated ISIS(Queen of Heaven) under a 2nd false lam(b) Islam(b)... they used martyrdom again to establish the psychopaths word : and then Islam is highly dictated spirit to ensure self control: they practically worship their own control (opposed to Christians who worship pain/suffering as enlightenment to be like Jesus) and so 'the holy spirit' 'is' within Islam as ISIS the Queen of Heaven, but they are deceived through Muhammad to follow orders in a pyramid scheme that indoctrinates children and by which : the 'ego' is held through jesus and the 'spirit' is dictated through muhammad : meaning islam is masonic like the church and works on behalf of judaism ultimately.

there's a noble path in acknowledging her, I considered they might meditate also to produce artifacts in a sense: maybe like a monolith/monument or charge a wand type scenario : essentially embedding a frequency within something or resonating with it by focus of mind on the /x/

I consider dream quantum capable and perceived such a path to design the world for her; it was odd to see, I believe I saw God in a sense and he measured me with light etc

but... the 'odd' part looking back; was I understood the projection of control on the world itself: was one of fear. Like a nebulous cloud that can be manipulated by loaded inputs: gas lighting etc in order to see the Pharaohs path I saw 'that' first; and I understood 'he' was psychosis override as a 'free will' aspect in this regard...

I'm not sure why he was behind fear, I loved him when I saw him too, maybe he feared I would expose him... I appealed to him also and believe he came with me to a degree; I considered his mind a 'relatable' map of sorts by a genius: I wonder now who I saw really...

it has to have been the creator, he appeared as a Pharaoh to me essentially to commune? I showed the path of israel through his psychosis override walking the 'three' to unity (of concept to design world for the Queen) I suppose if he showed me such a thing it might not even be for me... it was based on all kinds of things and even had a heavenly alignment of 2 : 1 balanced sequentially as the 1 male is a duality of Ra: sun+father : the mothers being Isis and El : moon+Earth the moon would represent all heaven as would the father (he is dream mesh=all universe, maybe all stars? idk)

I believe 'when I saw the path of the Pharaoh' then 'he too' showed me the etheric pyramid of abraham... like it could all come down at once: perhaps a spirit message supposed to align with the trinity of Orion which places their construct ~10,000 years ago or so... why was the message sent through 'dream'(psychosis etc) I wonder : I think this world needs to identify the source to compute faster for something inevitable... 'alignments' to ~heaven~ produce faster processing on a biological level imo

I think messages are within the dream mesh, from God and such and 'he' is showing us to make peace with a concept perhaps :)

'she' is the parallel of Death, and I believe we are supposed to harmonize with this 'or' likely we 'fail' as a species to 'see' divinity... I believe spooky things like if we project love as a world we will be saved too (almost impossible with deliberate ideological division)

The image is a simple, black and white line drawing of a person's face. The person's head is depicted in profile, with the face showing a neutral expression. The drawing is simplistic, with no shading or depth, and the lines are thin and straight, giving the image a cartoon-like appearance. There are no visible texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the drawing is reminiscent of digital art or a meme, often used for humorous or satirical purposes.

This take is strange to me, given that Lilith, or really lillins are contemporaneous with Inanna. The lillins were malevolent sexual spirits, but they weren't particularly special. They weren't gods or demons, and while they were opposed to Inanna in the Huluppu tree story, they aren't really associated with her to my knowledge. Instead of being demons or angels, they were thought of as almost animal-like. This series by Esoterica is always relevant when discussing Lilith: <https://youtu.be/n1EKccz4fS0>

The image is a vibrant and colorful illustration that appears to be a digital artwork. At the center, there is a figure with a radiant crown of light, surrounded by five other figures. The central figure is the most prominent, with a radiant crown of light radiating from the top of their head. Surrounding this central figure are five other figures, each with their own distinct crowns and crowns that are also radiating light. The figures are depicted in a variety of colors, including shades of blue, green, yellow, and red, and are adorned with elaborate headdresses and jewelry. The background of the image is a gradient of purple and blue hues, with a subtle hint of white and gold accents. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of ancient Egyptian or Middle Eastern art, with its use of bright colors and intricate details.

The Akkadians flourished 2500 years after the Sumerians, by which time the divine feminine and the natural harmonic resonance it experiences with the divine masculine had been supplanted by spiritually dead souls like Sargon. In Sumerian times, the lived experience of transgressing sex-based norms (gender identity hadn't been discovered yet) was representative of Inana's power to change that which humans cannot, her ability to strike fierce reverence in the awe of her people, and to create her ritual performers (transsexuals) to sing and dance and enrapture with their beauty, liminality was prized, these souls were seen as resonant on a higher level, a holy and sacred one.

Alright I will share some details. desu my memory of all the events are fading, and I might be switching Stormy with Remmy. But basically the old OP's threads got infiltrated by a bunch of glowies. They spammed the threads a whole ton. The threads kept sliding to the archive time and again. After a while the OP created a discord, where the glowies dove right in. He became isolated in the discord, surrounded by glowies, they convinced him the only way to find true beauty is to cosplay as a girl. He started becoming more and more feminine, until they leaked all the pictures onto the threads to discredit the OP. He basically had to cut all contact, and then went wild on the final thread. Nobody has heard from him since then.

the old OP was convinced by glowies to become a girl in 2 weeks, got exposed, freaked out, and obliterated the old threads.

Nevermind that absolutely anyone can lock someone in a basement, and torture them for however long they can, without proving anything; as all you need is a "Stargate" style alien technology sacophagous to be able to torture anyone indefinitely; without the torture actually being proof of anything. Regardless; by their very own standards; the Angels and the beings of the talmud/torah/bible/koran are sicko demented tyrants, and the people who worship them are worse than criminals; while they insist that the only "valid" way to oppose them is by worshipping a goat, while engaging in homosexual intercourse, while wearing a rainbow in the path of "satanism"; while also simultaneously labeling everything else as either "false" or "satanism"; and denying the existence of all the other Gods in human history, both past and present.

But the glorification of war doesn't seem like an accident of history and seems integral to the "goddess of Love and War" archetype.

If there must be war, I'd rather an Aphrodite Athenia rather than an Aphrodite Aeria, if that makes any sense. Dunno. Figuring it out.

It was written by devs, or ex-devs, that much is true, but it is controversial and hasn't appeared in game, so the matter isn't settled. Some seem to disagree. There's also dragonbreaks, but it seems beyond that. But of course I acknowledge Vivec was superfluous God-king able to make hard choices, despite how it ended. I'll wait for a sign, cause when I trip balls I sometimes feel the presence of Daedra but haven't of Almsivi as of yet, or wait for the next game but that would probably be longer lol. I think in canon Vivec still exists as a God though because of Chim. And it's worth comparing him to the DB night mother, which appears to be another attempted, but unsuccessful mantling of Lord Mephala, who nonetheless remains in existence as a powerful spirit despite never having near as much power. And unlike Azura, Mephala doesn't seem to dislike the Tribunal, nor would alleged murder be something she'd hold against them.

By the grace of Enki, the wise, the crafty, the divine spark of inspiration, such creatures are more numerous in the lands of Kemet than the vermin they feed upon.

Amongst the ranks of the great gods of Kemet is a god who possesses the attribute of the Mau, who conquered a great serpent, who commands the sun and the moon, and who has her House no more than two leagues from Memphis.

The creature sustains itself, conceals the leavings of its own waste, eliminates vermin most efficiently and provides pleasant company. Such a creature is of course made unto the princely host of heaven. A blessing that it has been received in the land of Sumer and Akkad.

Given under my hand this 9th day of the month of sowing.

The ME (𒂗, Akkadian: paršu) are the decrees of civilization. They are, in their totality, the attributes that make up the whole human civilized experiences, be they emotions of euphoria or despair, crafts and professions, myth and religion, offices and functions, natural and physical forces, etc, etc. Some are reserved for deities like Inana ("to go down to the underworld", "to return from the underworld", "to turn male to female", "to turn female to male" - all of these are ME), others - fire, writing, metallurgy, priestly offices, jubilation, disaster, betrayal, life and death, etc, etc - were shared with the people of Uruk at the dawn of history.

A forerunner to Lilith may appear in the Sumerian texts. There's a demon called ki-sikil-lil-la (means: maiden-phantasm), called in Babylonian lilitu. In both cases the operative word is lil (phantasm, breath of life, spirit).

Inana is called ninmešara ("mistress of a myriad powers" - there's that word ME) - but her driving force is entropy, passion, change, transformation. It's the clamour, chaos, passion and intensity that drives her in battle and in lust. Her powers are ever advancing and those who proclaim to follow her but do not strive to match her are met with fury in her eyes. She will tear you down and remake you and in doing so, expose those aspects of you that are buried beneath the personal, cultural and social debris of the ages.

"Queen of Heaven" is an authentically Sumerian title. Skills of Hebraic religion, like yourself, buried the truth about the origins of human civilisation beneath the desert, but so compelling was the human longing for the Queen of Heaven and the divine assembly that the Roman church had to reinvent it wholesale in the form of Mary and the saints.

christianity heavily syncretized with the cult of Isis (a ridiculous popular cult during the late empire to the point of basically every harbor city having at least one temple to Isis) To overcome the cult of Isis, christianity first made Christ into a more "motherly" figure and then adopted the imagery of the Madonna and baby Jesus to rival the status of Isis as queen of heaven. Christianity also heavily mixed with Platonism (that's where the idea of an infinite good and transcendental, all-knowing and all-powerful God came from which wasn't really a part of the christian doctrine before)

There is a difference between "Israelite", "Israeli" and even "Jew" - you follow an eschatological messianic Hebrew faith and our civilisation is suffering the consequences of being built on an eschatological messianic spiritual foundation. Those spiritual principles of conquest were baked into the doctrine of the church of Rome at its foundation. By burrowing into the organs of state control of the Roman Empire, like a parasite, that Church was able to ensure that it survived the death of that Empire, and dictate the mythopoeic narrative of the new order.

This is a thread for the discussion of worship and conjuration of Inanna-Ishtar and Aphrodite Urania, along with related entities such as Venus, Hekate, Isis, and Astaroth. However you work with the Queen of Heaven and her entourage, you're welcome to discuss here.

"Inanna was worshiped in Sumer as early as 4000 BCE, but it was not until the post-Sargonic era that she became one of the most widely venerated deities of the Mesopotamian people.

Appearing in more literary compositions than any other deity, Inanna embodied endless complexities and contradictions: an unbridled goddess at once upholding and destroying the status quo; a passionate goddess engaging in romantic and destructive erotic love; a heavenly goddess who trod the underworld; a feminine goddess who was sometimes portrayed as a bearded warrior; and a mercurial goddess bestowing tender mercies even as she moved freely from one conquest to another."

If you're interested in working with one of these entities, the best things you can do are to start meditating (bhakti or raja yoga or shamatha for instance), banishing (LBRP for instance), and making offerings. Preferably do all three daily, or at least a few times a week. This will get her attention and improve your ability to communicate with her, as well as generally train your occult abilities. Eventually I'd like to develop a regime focused around historical and revealed techniques from Inanna is above his head.

"As for Uruk, home of Anu and Ishtar, city of kinky women, prostitutes, and courtesans, whom Ishtar rescued from their husbands and empowered,
Barbarian men and women hurl howls at them.

They oust the temple-boys and cult-men from the Eanna (temple district) – those whom Ishtar turned from males to females, to awe the people, who carry the dagger, the razor, the scalpel, and the knife, who transgress taboos to please Ishtar.
You put a dangerous, merciless ruler in charge of them;
he harassed the women until they neglected their rites.

Ishtar was furious; she raged at Uruk.

She unleashed an enemy to sweep across their land, like a torrent sweeps away the scattered grain."

Ancient Article Discussion – "Ea Loves Seduction-Magic" (MAD V 8) Wed 03 May 2023 23:32:36 No.34699648 Report

The oldest surviving love-incantation in the world

"Ea Loves Seduction-Magic

[The magician]

Seduction-magic, the child of Ishtar, dwells between her thighs.
They swell up with fragrant nectar.

Oh lovely maidens, you are both blossoming;
you came down to the garden.
To the garden you came,
and you produced the fragrant nectar.[1]

[The client]

I seize your nectar-filled mouth;
I seize your openings of every color;
I seize your wet genitals.[2]
I mount on the "garden of Sîn";
I "cut down the poplar-tree for her day."[3]
Fence me in amidst the boxwood trees, like a shepherd fences in a flock,
a goat her kid, an ewe her lamb,
a jenny her foal.[4]

[The magician]

Adorned are his hands, harpweed oil on his lips,[5]
a cup of oil in his hands,
a cup of cedar on his shoulders.

The seduction-magics have whispered to her,
and they have driven her crazy.[6]

I hereby seize your mouth of lovemaking.
By the goddesses Ishtar and Ishara,
I adjure you:
Until your neck and his neck are pressed together, you shall have no relief!"

So I wonder, there are many pagans who wish to comprehend the change the christians forced us to undergo. And what is truly ours. Do you agree with pic related, that christianity is a religious that is mostly for midwitted low IQ tards?

I am trying to find the social dynamics in which even people like priestesses of Ishtar operated it, in the era before/near the christians, and I think it was how I describe it. The various cults...and multiple deities under the pagans were more tolerated than what we have today with the christian healer kings.

Which means that for your survival, as various worshipers, the christians really are a #1 enemy.

If you provide minimal input as to what you expect of the bot, you get almost no personal/mental feedback loops. They are a great tool for study. And if you know the books especially because you read them yourself, you can estimate if it is truly the voice of the dead. This shadow business, is very similar to the "pathological altruism" that was done on lefties/liberals. It predicts fairly well what christians do and how they act.

That is why I think that going for a more pagan world type of social dynamics, for our people, is probably a better solution than christianity.

How to worship her?

There's adoration, prayers, hymns, offerings, libation, sacred masturbation, sacred sex and many other ways.

How to pray to her?

You can use your own words or recite long prayers, many can be found online. Take a look at the "Innana - Queen of Heaven (Her hymns and stories from Sumer)" book on /omg/ library and on "Babylonian Penitential Psalms". It's advised to kneel but not bow or prostrate in front of her, neither look behind you. Raise your hands to pray or keep them together. End your prayers with "Ishtar za-mi!" (Ishtar be praised!) or "Kug Ishtar zamizu dugakam!" (Holy Ishtar, it is sweet to praise you!).

How to make offerings

Always light incense in an altar for offerings, a candle is optional but encouraged.

A common offering is unleavened cakes shaped in the form of a female figure or in the Star of Ishtar, accompanied by wine or milk. Other kinds of food may be offered, but avoid junk food. After some time the food must be consumed, and the liquids poured on the ground or a sink. Offering semen or other sexual fluids is controversial.

How to make an altar?

Have a clean space to dedicated to her, and be clean when interacting with it. Use a statue, figurine or image, raised on an elevated platform that serves as a dais.

Have a votive statue representing yourself in position of worship.

Beautiful live plants, gold, silver, carnelian and lapis lazuli objects, especially lapis lazuli is encouraged, having a bowl of water can also increase ritual purity.

Doing prayers and offerings naked is encouraged, but if you decide to offer sexual fluids (a bit controversial), don't cum on the statue/figurine on the altar, do it in a bowl.

How to do sacred masturbation/sex

Pray to Ishtar and ask for her blessings. Allow yourself to be engulfed by passion and love, focus on the beauty of your material/partner and thank Ishtar for it/her/him/them. Avoid depreciation, self-depreciation and sexual competition completely; don't allow your ego to taint your pure and holy lust. Further steps can be taken based on Mantak Chia's Multi-Orgasmic Man, which also has instructions for women and couples' cultivation, in spite of the title.

Is she the "Whore of Babylon"?

No, the Whore of Babylon on the christian bible refers to a city, as seen on Revelations 17:18. Ishtar is seen on the bible as Astarte, the Canaanite goddess that people baked cakes for, such as Jeremiah 7:18. However, she bears the title Hierodule of Heaven, as she's the matron of sacred prostitution.

Is she Astaroth?

Maybe. In The True Grimoire, Jake Stratton-Kent discusses how there is a clear line of historical currents that leads from the ancient Inanna to the medieval Astaroth, and how the grimoire technologies are themselves descended from those that would've been used by ancient magicians. If this is true, Goetia may have the best preserved techniques for working directly with the Queen of Heaven in her chthonic (underworld) form.

Is she Lilith?

No, Lilith is a malevolent spirit that appears in the Huluppu tree story and was defeated by Gilgamesh. In fact, it is likely that there was originally not just one Lilith, but a class of animal-like spirits called lillins. Recommend Esoterica's video series on the subject for a historical discussion on Lilith: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=n1EKccz4fS0>

What other names for her?

Aphrodite and Venus are probably Ishtar; Aphrodite Urania also bears the Queen of Heaven title. The Virgin Mary, Isis, and Hekate also have many historical similarities, and are likely adjacent entities.

Why did she send the Bull of Heaven against Gilgamesh after he helped her so many times?

When Ishtar was interested in him, instead of inventing an excuse he rudely reminded her of every single wrongdoing on her life, disrespecting and angering her. Enkidu is killed after throwing the meat of the dead bull against the goddess.

Youthful Utu, Calf of the wild cow,
Calf of the wild cow, calf of the righteous son,

Utu, royal brother of Inana!

He who brings thirst to streets and paths,

Utu, he of the tavern, provided beer,

Youthful Utu, he of the tavern, provided beer.

Inana speaks:

"My brother, awe-inspiring lord,

Let me ride with you to the mountains!

Lord of heaven, awe-inspiring lord,

Lord, let me ride with you to the mountains;

To the mountains of herbs, To the mountains of cedars, To the mountains;

To the mountains of cedars, The mountains of cypresses, To the mountains;

To the mountains of silver, The mountains of lapis lazuli, To the mountains;

To the mountains where the gakkul plants grow, To the mountains;

To the distant source of the rolling rivers, To the mountains."

"My brother, come, let me go with you!

My brother, so my eyes gaze the midst of the sea!

My brother, the women know the male member;

Utu, the women are copulating with men;

I am unfamiliar with womanly matters, with the male member!

I am unfamiliar with womanly matters, with sexual intercourse!

I am unfamiliar with womanly matters, with kissing!

I am unfamiliar with sexual intercourse,

I am unfamiliar with kissing!"

"Whatever exists in the mountains, let us eat that.

Whatever exists in the hills, let us eat that.

In the mountains of herbs, in the mountains of cedars,

In the mountains of cedars, the mountains of cypresses,

Whatever exists in the mountains, let us eat that."

"After the herbs have been eaten,

After the cedars have been eaten,

Put your hand in my hand and then escort me to my house.

Escort me to my house, to my house in Zabalam.

Escort me to my mother, to my mother Ningal.

Escort me to my mother-in-law, to Ninsumun.

Escort me to my sister-in-law, to Jectin-ana."

"For those who venture forth single-handed,

Who venture forth from a man's house,

For those who venture forth from a man's house,

Who venture forth single-handed,

Utu: you are their mother,

Utu, you are their father.

Utu, as for the orphans,

Utu, as for the widows,

Utu: the orphans look to you as their father,

Utu, you succour the widows as their mother."The brother spoke to his younger sister.

The Sun God, Utu, spoke to Inanna, saying:

"Young Lady, the flax in its fullness is lovely.

Inanna, the grain is glistening in the furrow.

I will hoe it for you. I will bring it to you.

A piece of linen, big or small, is always needed.
Inanna, I will bring it to you."
"Brother, after you've brought me the flax, Who will comb it for me?"
"Sister, I will bring it to you combed."
"Utu, after you've brought it to me combed,
Who will spin it for me?"
"Inanna, I will bring it to you spun."
"Brother, after you've brought the flax to me spun,
Who will braid it for me?"
"Sister, I will bring it to you braided."
"Utu, after you've brought it to me braided,
Who will warp it for me?"
"Inanna, I will bring it to you warped."
"Brother, after you've brought the flax to me warped,
Who will weave it for me?"
"Sister, I will bring it to you woven."
"Utu, after you've brought it to me woven,
Who will bleach it for me?"
"Inanna, I will bring it to you bleached."
"Brother, after you've brought my bridal sheet to me,
Who will go to bed with me?"
Utu, who will go to bed with me?"
"Sister, your bridegroom will go to bed with you.
He who was born from a fertile womb,
He who was conceived on the sacred marriage throne,
Dumuzi, the shepherd! He will go to bed with you."

Inanna spoke:

"No, brother!
The man of my heart works the hoe.
The farmer! He is the man of my heart!
He gathers the grain into great heaps.
He brings the grain regularly into my storehouses.

Utu spoke:

"Sister, marry the shepherd.
Why are you unwilling?
His cream is good; his milk is good.
Whatever he touches shines brightly.
Inanna, marry Dumuzi.
You who adorn yourself with the agate necklace of fertility,
Why are you unwilling?
Dumuzi will share his rich cream with you.
You who are meant to be the king's protector,
Why are you unwilling?"

Inanna spoke:

"The shepherd! I will not marry the shepherd!
His clothes are coarse; his wool is rough.
I will marry the farmer.
The farmer grows flax for my clothes. The farmer grows barley for my table."

Dumuzi spoke:

"Why do you speak about the farmer?
Why do you speak about him?
If he gives you black flour,
I will give you black wool.
If he gives you white flour,
I will give you white wool.
If he gives you beer,
I will give you sweet milk.
If he gives you bread,
I will give you honey cheese.
I will give the farmer my leftover cream.
I will give the farmer my leftover milk.
Why do you speak about the farmer?
What does he have more than I do?"

Inanna spoke:

"Shepherd, without my mother, Ningal, you'd be driven away,
Without my grandmother, Ningikuga, you'd be driven into the steppes,
Without my father, Nanna, you'd have no roof,
Without my brother, Utu..."

Dumuzi spoke:

"Inanna, do not start a quarrel.
My father, Enki, is as good as your father, Nanna.
My mother, Sirtur, is as good as your mother, Ningal.
My sister, Geshtinanna, is as good as yours.
Queen of the palace, let us talk it over.
Inanna, let us sit and speak together.
I am as good as Utu.
Enki is as good as Nanna.
Sirtur is as good as Ningal.
Queen of the palace, let us talk it over."

The word they had spoken
Was a word of desire.
From the starting of the quarrel
Came the lovers' desire.

The shepherd went to the royal house with cream.
Dumuzi went to the royal house with milk.
Before the door, he called out:

"Open the house, My Lady, open the house!"

Inanna ran to Ningal, the mother who bore her.
Ningal counseled her daughter, saying:

"My child, the young man will be your father.
My daughter, the young man will be your mother.
He will treat you like a father.
He will care for you like a mother.
Open the house, My Lady, open the house!"

Inanna, at her mother's command,
Bathed and anointed herself with scented oil.
She covered her body with the royal white robe.
She readied her dowry.
She arranged her precious lapis beads around her neck.
She took her seal in her hand.
Dumuzi waited expectantly.
Inanna opened the door for him.
Inside the house she shone before him
Like the light of the moon.
Dumuzi looked at her joyously.
He pressed his neck close against hers.
He kissed her.

Inanna spoke:

"What I tell you
Let the singer weave into song.
What I tell you,
Let it flow from ear to mouth,
Let it pass from old to young:
My vulva, the horn,
The Boat of Heaven,
Is full of eagerness like the young moon.
My untilled land lies fallow.
As for me, Inanna,
Who will plow my vulva?
Who will plow my high field?
Who will plow my wet ground?
As for me, the young woman,
Who will plow my vulva?
Who will station the ox there?
Who will plow my vulva?"

Dumuzi replied:

"Great Lady, the king will plow your vulva.

I, Dumuzi the King, will plow your vulva."

Inanna:

"Then plow my vulva, man of my heart! Plow my vulva!"

At the king's lap stood the rising cedar.

Plants grew high by their side.

Grains grew high by their side.

Gardens flourished luxuriantly.

Inanna sang:

"He has sprouted; he has burgeoned;
He is lettuce planted by the water.
He is the one my womb loves best.
My well-stocked garden of the plain,
My barley growing high in its furrow,
My apple tree which bears fruit up to its crown,
He is lettuce planted by the water.
My honey-man, my honey-man sweetens me always.
My lord, the honey-man of the gods,
He is the one my womb loves best.
His hand is honey, his foot is honey,
He sweetens me always.
My eager impetuous caresser of the navel,
My caresser of the soft thighs,
He is the one my womb loves best,
He is lettuce planted by the water."

Dumuzi sang:

O Lady, your breast is your field.
Inanna, your breast is your field.
Your broad field pours out plants.
Your broad field pours out grain.
Water flows from on high for your servant.
Bread flows from on high for your servant.
Pour it out for me, Inanna.
I will drink all you offer."

Inanna sang:

"Make your milk sweet and thick, my bridegroom.
My shepherd, I will drink your fresh milk.
Wild bull, Dumuzi, make your milk sweet and thick.
I will drink your fresh milk.
Let the milk of the goat flow in my sheepfold.
Fill my holy churn with honey cheese.
Lord Dumuzi, I will drink your fresh milk.
My husband, I will guard my sheepfold for you.
I will watch over your house of life, the storehouse,
The shining quivering place which delights Sumer
The house which decides the fates of the land,
The house which gives the breath of life to the people.
I, the queen of the palace, will watch over your house."

Dumuzi spoke:

"My sister, I would go with you to my garden.
Inanna, I would go with you to my garden.
I would go with you to my orchard.
I would go with you to my apple tree.
There I would plant the sweet, honey-covered seed."

Inanna spoke:

"He brought me into his garden.
My brother, Dumuzi, brought me into his garden.
I strolled with him among the standing trees,
I stood with him among the fallen trees,
By an apple tree I knelt as is proper.
Before my brother coming in song,
Who rose to me out of the poplar leaves,
Who came to me in the midday heat,
Before my lord Dumuzi,

I poured out plants from my womb.
I placed plants before him,
I poured out plants before him.
I placed grain before him,
I poured out grain before him.
I poured out grain from my womb."

Inanna sang:

"Last night as I, the queen, was shining bright,
Last night as I, the Queen of Heaven, was shining bright,
As I was shining bright and dancing,
Singing praises at the coming of the night
He met me—he met me!
My lord Dumuzi met me. He put his hand into my hand.
He pressed his neck close against mine.
My high priest is ready for the holy loins.
My lord Dumuzi is ready for the holy loins.
The plants and herbs in his field are ripe.
O Dumuzi! Your fullness is my delight!"

She called for it, she called for it, she called for the bed!
She called for the bed that rejoices the heart.
She called for the bed that sweetens the loins.
She called for the bed of kingship.
She called for the bed of queenship.

Inanna called for the bed:

"Let the bed that rejoices the heart be prepared!
Let the bed that sweetens the loins be prepared!
Let the bed of kingship be prepared!
Let the bed of queenship be prepared!
Let the royal bed be prepared!"
Inanna spread the bridal sheet across the bed.

She called to the king:

"The bed is ready!"

She called to her bridegroom:

"The bed is waiting!"

He put his hand in her hand.

He put his hand to her heart.

Sweet is the sleep of hand-to-hand.

Sweeter still the sleep of heart-to-heart.

Inanna spoke:

"I bathed for the wild bull,
I bathed for the shepherd Dumuzi,
I perfumed my sides with ointment,
I coated my mouth with sweet-smelling amber,
I painted my eyes with kohl.
He shaped my loins with his fair hands,
The shepherd Dumuzi filled my lap with cream and milk,
He stroked my pubic hair,
He watered my womb.
He laid his hands on my holy vulva,
He smoothed my black boat with cream,
He quickened my narrow boat with milk,
He caressed me on the bed.
Now I will caress my high priest on the bed,
I will caress the faithful shepherd Dumuzi,
I will caress his loins, the shepherdship of the land,
I will decree a sweet fate for him."

The Queen of Heaven,

The heroic woman, greater than her mother,

Who was presented to me by Enki,

Inanna, the First Daughter of the Moon,

Decreed the fate of Dumuzi:

"In battle I am your leader,

In combat I am your armor-bearer,
In the assembly I am your advocate,
On the campaign I am your inspiration.
You, the chosen shepherd of the holy shrine,
You, the king, the faithful provider of Uruk,
You, the light of An's great shrine,
In all ways you are fit:
To hold your head high on the lofty dais,
To sit on the lapis lazuli throne,
To cover your head with the holy crown,
To wear long clothes on your body,
To bind yourself with the garments of kingship,
To carry the mace and sword,
To guide straight the long bow and arrow,
To fasten the throw-stick and sling at your side,
To race on the road with the holy sceptre in your hand,
And the holy sandals on your feet,
To prance on the holy breast like a lapis lazuli calf.
You, the sprinter, the chosen shepherd,
In all ways you are fit.
May your heart enjoy long days.
That which An has determined for you, may it not be altered
That which Enlil has granted, may it not be changed.
You are the favorite of Ningal.
Inanna holds you dear."

Ninshubur, the faithful servant of the holy shrine of Uruk, Led Dumuzi to the sweet thighs of Inanna and spoke:
"My queen, here is the choice of your heart,
The king, your beloved bridegroom.
May he spend long days in the sweetness of your holy loins.
Give him a favorable and glorious reign.
Grant him the king's throne, firm in its foundations.
Grant him the shepherd's staff of judgment.
Grant him the enduring crown with the radiant and noble diadem.
From where the sun rises to where the sun sets,
From south to north,
From the Upper Sea to the Lower Sea,
From the land of the huluppu tree to the land of the cedar,
Let his shepherd's staff protect all of Sumer and Akkad.
As the farmer, let him make the fields fertile,
As the shepherd, let him make the sheepfolds multiply,
Under his reign let there be vegetation,
Under his reign let there be rich grain.
In the marshland may the fish and birds chatter,
In the canebrake may the young and old reeds grow high,
In the steppe may the masbgur trees grow high,
In the forests may the deer and wild goats multiply,
In the orchards may there be honey and wine,
In the gardens may the lettuce and cress grow high,
In the palace may there be long life.
May there be floodwater in the Tigris and Euphrates,
May the plants grow high on their banks and fill the meadows,
May the Lady of Vegetation pile the grain in heaps and mounds.
O my Queen of Heaven and Earth,
Queen of all the universe,
May he enjoy long days in the sweetness of your holy loins."
The king went with lifted head to the holy loins.
He went with lifted head to the loins of Inanna.
He went to the queen with lifted head.
He opened wide his arms to the holy priestess of heaven.
Inanna spoke:
"My beloved, the delight of my eyes, met me. We rejoiced together.
He took his pleasure of me."
